

FLIERS TO HOP TODAY FOR PARIS

Yellow Bird Makes Test Flight From Spanish Beach — Stowaway Will Be Taken to France — Has Entered Good Graces of Pilots—Spaniards Are Hospitable.

COMILLAS, Spain, June 15.—(AP) The French trans-Atlantic monoplane Yellow Bird took off from its landing place on the beach here this afternoon, but returned shortly afterward.

The men, Jean Assolant, Rene LeFevre and Armeno Lotti, were accompanied by their stowaway, Arthur Scheiber, of Portland, Me., and it was generally understood that they were headed for their ultimate goal, Le Bourget, but on their return they said that they had only made a test flight.

The aviators explained through an interpreter later that they had decided not to leave for Le Bourget before 3 or 4 o'clock this afternoon (between 9 a. m. and 10 a. m. eastern standard time).

Shortage of fuel forced the Yellow Bird down on a rocky beach at Cape Orange west of here at 8:30 (3:30 p. m. E. S. T.) last night (5:30 miles short of their goal, Le Bourget flying field, Paris).

Assolant, the pilot, blamed the stowaway for the fuel shortage and consequently the failure to land on French soil, explaining it had been necessary to release some of the precious petrol from the tanks as soon as Scheiber was discovered aboard, in order to gain height.

"I had not counted on the extra weight when I estimated our fuel load," he said.

The aviators seemed to have developed a real fondness for their uninvited guest, and he for them. During the flight he shared what food the aviators carried with them, and he spent last night with them at the local hotel.

He apparently was laughing under great emotion as the plane landed and expressed complete joy when he set his foot on solid earth. He found no one to talk to among the Spaniards who crowded around and seemed lost at the fess made over him in the strange language. Assolant explained that he was not discovered until the plane was in full flight, when they decided against turning back to put him off.

Plane Undamaged.

The plane was not damaged in landing. It needed only fuel and a new "starter" for the landing gear in order to take off and continue its flight. The original "starter" they had left on board the course of their flight in order to lighten the plane after they discovered Scheiber aboard.

The little town, containing but a few hundred people and decades ago the rendezvous of the Spanish royal family, who came here for sea bathing, gave the aviators a tumultuous welcome, affording them their first taste of hero worship.

Civil guards formed a cordon around the plane to save it from souvenir hunters as the four aviators left it for town and dinner—some more substantial than the bananas and oranges on which they had subsisted in crossing.

The Spaniards pled them with innumerable questions, which they answered as well as they could through their interpreter. They said they were satisfied with their trip.

Assolant added: "It was hard going at times. We experienced almost every variety of weather and climate, but generally the wind favored us. The machine behaved splendidly, and drove triumphantly and unflinching through the fog, wind, rain, a gale of cold and a heavy storm.

"The storm obliged us to quit the stowaway lane we followed at the start and when we flew southward lengthening the course."

When the hospitable Spaniards relaxed their attention a little the aviators went to the post office and deposited the mail they had brought for Paris.

Sixteenth Crossing.

The landing of the Yellow Bird here completed the 16th crossing of the Atlantic in a heavier than air machine, and the eighth eastward crossing. There has been but one westward crossing of the north Atlantic by an airplane, although dirigibles have crossed five times.

There was a noteworthy coincidence in the flight's completion yesterday, June 14, 1929, which was the tenth anniversary of the completion of the first non-stop trans-Atlantic flight by Capt. John Newfound, to Clifton, Iceland, on June 14, 1919, by Capt. John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown, British officers. They flew a Vickers Vimy bomber and made the 1900 miles in 15 hours and 12 minutes.

When finally they landed the plane's radiator was practically dry, and there were but a few drops of gasoline left in the tank. Had it not been for sighting the beach here they might have continued a few miles further and had to attempt a forced landing in the fast gathering dark at a lo-

LEGAL BATTLE LOOMING OVER KINCAID DANCE

A big legal battle is looming and possibly next week may reach its height as a result of a dance to be held this evening at Gold Hill, which has been announced to continue until 2 o'clock tomorrow morning on the grounds of sufficient population to place Gold Hill beyond the jurisdiction of the county sheriff in the regulation of dance pavilions, as defined in a law passed by the state legislature.

The law declares towns of 500 population and under fall directly under the jurisdiction of the sheriff and county court in the regulation of dance pavilions. However, in places of more population, the right to issue licenses is vested with the city government itself. Luke Kincaid, proprietor of the Gold Hill pavilion, declares the town has 520 bona fide residents.

However, the claim is regarded as an inurement by the sheriff's office, which contends the 1929 United States government census supplies the only true record of population. If the latter claim is sustained in court, Gold Hill will have a population of only a few more than 400, taking away the power from the city to regulate its dances. It is likely tonight's dance will be visited by officers and it is possible the proprietor may be arrested either tonight or next week to test the strength of the law and to determine Gold Hill's accurate population.

MADISON, Wis., June 15.—(AP)—Two University of Washington crews, victorious over Wisconsin shells, today set out for Poughkeepsie, N. Y., hopeful of being the surprise entrant of the intercollegiate regatta.

The husky varsity boat, revealing smooth power, won over the University of Wisconsin crew yesterday in a two-mile race on the waters of Lake Mendota. Tied in 11:32, the Huskies won almost as they liked, although their margin over the Badgers was little more than a length.

The Washington junior eight also made an impressive showing, pulling away to a four-length victory over the Wisconsin junior varsity. The young Huskies' time was one second slower than that of the varsity race.

PARK ROAD TO CAMP NOT CLEAR OF SNOW

The many Medford people who had planned to motor up to Center National park tomorrow and into the park as far as government camp, to which point the road was yesterday expected to be clear of snow by the evening, will be disappointed to learn that that drive is not possible.

A phone message received here from the park this forenoon stated that rain fell during last night at the park and that it was raining so hard up there today that all work by the large crews engaged in clearing the roads and on pine beetle pest destroying work was stopped for the day.

CARDS REGAIN SLIM LEAD BY BRAVE DEFEAT

Fuchs Force Yields in 4 to 3 Contest — Giants Win Over Pirates to Aid Red Bird Percentage Column Two Points.

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN Associated Press Sports Writer

After two days of vain battling against rain signals, the Cardinals settled themselves yesterday to the more pleasant task of beating the Braves. The Red Birds celebrated the delayed opening of the Boston series by shading Judge Fuchs' tribe, 4 to 3, and so regained first place by the precarious margin of half a game, or 2 per centage points. The Giants paved the way for this Cardinal advance by turning back the Pirates, 7 to 2, after taking two Buccaneer polks on the chin in the two preceding afternoons.

The Pirates can't win them all, and this becomes particularly evident when a pitcher like Larry Benton gives the hard swinging Buccaneers just seven hits, and seldom was in any danger after the Giants knocked Jess Petty from the box in the first inning. It was Petty's second knockout in two days.

Brooklyn committed three misplays in the ninth at Cincinnati yesterday, enabling the Reds to score three times and tie, but to win the game in the eleventh. The Reds humiliated Cleveland a second time as Bob Grove turned in fine ball to win by 9 to 6, and the Hugmen stamped the Tigers, 15 to 4.

The Yanks had another fine hitting afternoon, raking Geo. Uhle, George Smith and John Truhomme for 17 hits, including Lou Gehrig's sixteenth and seventeenth home runs.

The defeat was Uhle's third in succession, and was the hardest battering he has experienced since breaking his run in nine victories. Twelve Yankee hits, including both Gehrig's homers, rained upon him in two official innings. He was lifted in the third.

Washington faced and defeated the White Sox by 4 to 1 and the Browns nosed out on the Red Sox by 7 to 6 in remaining American league fixtures.

Instead of playing Butte Falls, as had been previously announced, the Jacksonville baseball team will play Ashland tomorrow afternoon at Jacksonville. The Jacksonville nine has not yet been defeated, and in playing Ashland, has the hardest game so far this season. The admission to the game will be free, and if Jacksonville indicates it has sufficient baseball ability, an effort will be made to include it in the southern Oregon and northern California league now being formed.
