

FARNOL SERIAL BEGINS MONDAY MAIL TRIBUNE

'For the Love of a Lady,' Thrilling Romance Secured for Readers—Dashing Gallants, Beautiful Women Feature Story.

Fast-moving action and a breath-taking intensity of interest mark the development of romance in "For the Love of a Lady," by Jeffrey Farnol, which will appear in the Mail Tribune in daily installments beginning Monday, June 24.

In a surprisingly brief period, Farnol carries his characters through the gripping events—love, cruel misunderstanding, courage and daring exploits. The dramatic climax is followed by a sudden but delightful conclusion. From the moment Sir Richard Goyford finds beautiful Helen D'Arcy in his home, attempting to steal a letter, until the last scene of the story, the author holds the reader spellbound, fascinated by quick succession of vivid word pictures.

Stirring Action Abounds. Farnol does not limit the plot to a single theme, but weaves together a group of masterly handled lines of interest, all converging on the romance of a dashing nobleman and a beautiful heroine, the toast of the countryside.

A gypsy woman chants dire prophecies and weird incantations in the quaint Romany tongue. Two notorious highwaymen risk capture and death to aid a friend. A dashing nobleman saves his rival in love from drowning and thereby falls into the hands of his enemies. A hunted man throws aside all precautions and comes out of hiding to be near the girl who once spurned him, but the girl he loves.

Well-Drawn Characters. Colorful characters, expertly drawn in Farnol's splendid technique, will especially appeal to all lovers of fiction. Sir Richard Goyford and Helen D'Arcy, the central figures, are ideally portrayed. Richard's cousin, Julian, is the evil genius behind the plots of Viscount Brocklehurst and Captain Despard, two of Helen's suitors.

Helen's aunt, the duchess, looks at the world through eyes of common sense, and provides much of the delightful humor. Black Nick and the Gallant Parson are highwaymen of particular interest. Truffon, an old gypsy, draws Sir Richard into the protection of clan when danger threatens him.

Commended by Critics. The rapid-fire action and distinctive word picture from critics when the story was published in book form under the title, "Cyclone of Wear,"

"A glorious tale... with a charming love idyll, told in Mr. Farnol's best mood," says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Associated Press comments: "... a romance with a swiftly running plot, quick dialogue and rollicking adventure."

Boston Transcript: "The dainty charm of my lady Helen, the dashing, sweet perversity of her lover, the quarrels, the gallantries... the swooning and satisfying, a romance to delight the most romantic."

Indianapolis News: "Through the maze of intrigue and adventures in love and jealousy, Farnol guides his characters... with an extraordinarily skillful touch and charm."

Detroit Free Press: "... an extremely entertaining story—Farnol at his best."

Hatboro Evening Sun: "... refreshingly romantic."

Stars Monday, June 24. This distinctive romance is made available to readers of the Mail Tribune through its membership in The Associated Press Feature Service. The first daily installment will appear Monday, June 24.

Medford National Guard Members Enjoying Camp Clatsop Routine Despite "Unusual" Rainy Weather

CAMP CLATSOP, Ore., June 15. (Special)—Today is the fourth day in camp and all members of both companies from Medford are enjoying camp routine with the exception of two of the boys who are in the hospital. Corporal Charles Reed has an infection in his hand which he contracted before leaving for camp and the "medics" are keeping him in the hospital, but he is getting along so well that he is expected back "on duty" in a day or two.

Private William Feld had an unfortunate accident happen yesterday while out on the bayonet course when he jumped into the pit, turning his foot as he did so, and a result it was necessary to remove him from the field in the camp ambulance, and he will probably be confined to the camp hospital for the duration of the camp. The preliminary report of the camp surgeon is that he has a pressed fracture of his right leg, and it will be necessary to keep his leg in a cast for some time to come.

The first day in camp was given over entirely to making camp. For the first time in the history of the Oregon National Guard, the men of the company were required to set up the entire camp upon arrival. Heretofore an advance detachment has always done this work, and when the troops arrived their tents were all set up for them, but not so this time.

This innovation worked out well and the men got quite a kick out of establishing camp themselves. A Company and Headquarters company went about this work like a bunch of veterans and inside of two hours after arrival had their entire area of tents erected and camp established.

The second day in camp was given over to calisthenics, physical examinations, demonstration of pitching shelter tents and display of full field equipment, drills and schools of the soldier and the day was topped off with a regimental parade in the evening.

Settled Routine. The third day found the camp settling down to a well-planned schedule of camp routine, consisting of close order drills, extended line drills, bayonet demonstrations by regular company, routine drill by practical application of our new troops, musketry, and the day ended with our battalion participating in a regimental concert of the colors.

The fourth day, Saturday, started off with brigade inspection by Brigadier General George A. White, accompanied by his staff and Cavalry Patrolmen. Inspected the entire command, composed of nearly 3,000 men, and from reports made by war department inspectors attached to the camp, the troops were found to be in fine shape and well trained. As soon as the inspection was over the men were given passes and a general census of troops commenced by the nearby route and camp. Possible will be through with soldiers today and tomorrow, as all men not on special details have been excused from drill duties until 11 o'clock Sunday night.

KINCAID PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO LAW VIOLATION

Arrest Saturday Night Opening Gun in Battle to Test Dance Law—Population Is Main Question for Court to Decide.

With the opening guns in the dance hall closing war fired Saturday night when Sheriff Ralph Jennings ordered the Gold Hill and Jacksonville pavilions to close at midnight on grounds they were cities with less than 500 population, the legal battle testing the dance hall law, as passed by the last legislature, was underway today. Lake Kincaid, proprietor of the Gold Hill pavilion, is under arrest and appeared in the justice court today to enter a plea of not guilty. No bonds were set.

He is accused of failing to purchase a license from the county to operate a pavilion in Gold Hill, the population of which Kincaid claims to be over 500 people. He plans to fight the case to the highest court and it will be the first in the state to be so tested.

Gold Hill has a population of 520 people, according to a special census taken by Kincaid, with the aid of the Gold Hill News, and the present population, he said, is at its lowest ebb, due to some families moving away with the dismissal of school and comparative lack of employment at this time of the year.

However, it is the purpose of Sheriff Jennings to have Gold Hill's population based on the 1920 census, which gave the city only a little more than 400 people. The bill, as passed by the legislature, does not state what census is to be used in determining the population, leaving the matter entirely up to the discretion of the court in determining the true meaning of the bill. The legislation originally was written to include towns of 2500 population, based on the last official census.

Kincaid is represented by Newbury & Newbury, attorneys, and it is their plan to attack the constitutionality of the bill on grounds of class discrimination, picking out only a number of cities for special dance hall legislation and not affecting other corporations.

The Gold Hill hall was packed Saturday night, but the closing order was received by the dancers in good manner, and the same held true for the Jacksonville dance, which was being operated by the chamber of commerce of that city. Jacksonville claims to have 621 people, but in this case, Sheriff Jennings declares the 1920 census is the only true census, and it gives the city less than 500. It has not

He said in view of numerous complaints, special efforts will be made to stop truck speeding.
