BOEING TELEGRAPH DISPATCHES SHIPS

"Crandall Baker Five Aider Table Stunt." All of which may sound uninteresting, but which, as received at the Pacific Air Transport company's hangar here Monday meant that Pilot Harry Crandall left north from Oakland with the plane Baker at 5 a. m., carrying a mail load and three passengers. It was the first message to come in over the new printer telegraph system installed by Boeing System along the coastwise route of the Pacific Air Transport and the transcontinental route of Boeing Air Transport. Code is being used to save words and time, according to Maurice Tait, in charge of the receiving device here. The printer telegraph is being used to report weather conditions, arrivals and departures, orders and other information. Heretofore such work has been done by radio. Messages of the B. A. T. company have been named to facilitate sending over the printer system. Names of coast mountains and ranges were chosen so that there are the planes Hood, Shasta, Diablo, Rainier, Cascade and Baker. Three new ships to be added to the line are to be named Lassen, McKinley and Adams—Portland Journal.

At Radio Sunday. Unwelcome kisses that the regeneration of a pretty girl, came her to remove herself from a so-called life and eventually find happiness. That is the theme of the story, "The Woman from Hell," which plays the Radio tomorrow, featuring Mary Astor, Robert Armstrong and Roy D'Arcy.

Miss Astor portrays Des. Bonaldi, going out a livelihood by day as a "come-on" at a seaside amusement park show called "Hell." Her employer, the Barker, tells men they may kiss her if they catch her inside the show. One day a brutal fellow receives the reward, abducting the girl. She realizes that her life lacks any thing and as she sits zoning off, she, a light-house suggests all the things she has come to desire—cleanliness, security and solitude. Then she meets Jim Oakley, and the love drama is carried on to its terrific climax.

Continued efforts of the coast guard cutter Albatross and the Red Stack tug Sea Rover to pull the stranded boat from the rocks failed. Last night hopes of saving the vessel were given up and the crew removed. Corvallis—Extensive street paving under way.

Undoubtedly This Is a Pig Country, Says Strohmeier

News of the Screen

Hunt's Criticism Sunday. Melodrama, action, mystery, suspense are collected in the all-talking picture, "Chinatown Nights." The picture reveals the ultimate, little known side of the Oriental underworld of the large cities of the United States and, into it, is woven a strange and absorbing romance.

"Chinatown Nights" is as strange and unusual as the great, inscrutable Chinese underworld, with which it deals. It is mysterious, awesome, absorbing in its revelations of what goes on behind the doors of the sacred tea houses, the opium dens and the sinister meeting places of the tong factions.

About New York

By Richard G. Massock. NEW YORK.—The way lady who tip lavishly at night club check rooms would be surprised to know that the size of the coin as likely as not makes little difference to the girl in charge. She may get it, or she may not. In some of the better known places the girls share in the tips, but in others, especially the smaller spots, they are paid a salary, and the concessionaire takes all the rest.

A little lass who has worked in several representative "spots" is authority for the statement that two men can't check room deductions in a dozen places. And just to see that everything goes into the cash box the attendants are kept under surveillance.

The other morning, she said, a big-hearted celebrant handed her $2 bill and told her to split it with a co-worker. The recipient turned her right sole on the concession owner, who happened to be standing by. "Won't you let us keep this?" she asked. "No," said her boss, "but I'll treat you to a steak." And he did. The usual salary, the informant said, is $18 a week. Save your $15, however, for the girls make as much as $20 a week from a curious sideline—roasting almonds, dispensed in bags of 10 at 25 cents a bag. The girls keep the entire results, almost all of which is their profit.

With the cigarette vendors it is different. For the standard 15-cent cigarettes they charge a quarter, which goes to the concessionaire. But each sale means a tip which at least a dime and the girl keeps that. And just try to evade a cigarette girl.

Ellenburg released the car. The district attorney said the sergeant promised to return the car to the state but failed to do so.
