Brenneiser of Santa Maria, Cal., and W. Ray Fenton of Torrington, Conn. The art school bids fair to be an outstanding success this summer.

Each of these artists has been chosen for his superior ability in the special line of art they are to teach, and approve artistically inclined would do well to make an effort to take four of the eight courses offered.

Each course consists of 15 hours' work and confers two college credits, good in any college in Oregon or transferable to other states. Miss White has done some noteworthy things during the past year since leaving Ashland.

She has had three paintings—water colors—in the exhibition of The National Association of Women Sculptors and Painters. This society sends their exhibit on a "Rotary" of the United States, and Miss White's pictures went on this tour, also over "west on the rotary" of the American Water Color solar selections. Especially noteworthy were "Let All My Life Be Music," the song she rendered in the Atwater-Kent contest and "Come Love—The Long Day Comes," her prize winning song in the state high school contest. Her whistling number was also well received.

Mr. Peckham, basso, featured the song with which he won the Atwater-Kent contest, "Asleep in the Deep," as well as other well chosen numbers and showed promise of a brilliant future in concert and radio work.

"Dick Posey," beloved poet of the Rogue, gave as his feature number his latest original poem, "Memories of the Farm," recalling boyhood days to many of his hearers. He also introduced a bit of clever comedy with "The Great Comedian."

The whole program was one of real merit, and it was conceded to be one of the finest Copco radio presentations of the year. Next Tuesday the California Oregon Power company will present a new Mary Greiner radio drama, entitled "The Bride," by the popular "Copco Players."

Ashland Art School To Open Tomorrow

July 8th will see the Ashland Art school, under the direction of Miss Belle Cady White of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., open its fall doors for the summer term. There will be a six weeks' course finishing August 19th and as Miss White herself will conduct two fine courses and will have as her assistants, Miss Marguerite Hansen of Columbia university, Stanley G. Brenneiser of Santa Maria, Cal., and W. Ray Fenton of Torrington, Conn. The art school bids fair to be an outstanding success this summer.

Each course consists of 15 hours' work and confers two college credits, good in any college in Oregon or transferable to other states. Miss White has done some noteworthy things during the past year since leaving Ashland.

She has had three paintings—water colors—in the exhibition of The National Association of Women Sculptors and Painters. This society sends their exhibit on a "Rotary" of the United States, and Miss White's pictures went on this tour, also over "west on the rotary" of the American Water Color society and the New York Water Color club. These tours last one year and the collections are exhibited at the larger cities and more important art centers.

Miss White was elected one of the board of governors of the Brooklyn Society of Artists and gave a demonstration of water color painting before the society.

The picture she painted at this demonstration was the same size as those shown in Medford last summer, at the Presbyterian church.

It was said of her demonstration in a New York paper, "On Thursday evening, March 7, a most interesting demonstration of the making of a water color painting was presented before the Brooklyn Society of Artists by Miss Belle Cady White of the Neighborhood club, Clark street, Brooklyn."

Miss White completed a water color painting, 22 by 22 inches, within one hour and 15 minutes, before an unusually large and appreciative audience who were particularly impressed by the definiteness of her attack and her successful use of color, producing a most effective result.

This demonstration was preceded by a short talk reviewing the various phases of water color technique as compared with the present day approach in this medium.

Then Miss White showed a number of sketches made by Pratt students, who are following the method of approach which Miss White originated and is now using in her classes.

One art critic remarked that he had never seen anything finer in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashland and Medford are to have Miss Belle Cady White in our midst for five long weeks and receive the inspiration to be derived from her instruction and her personality.

What are we going to do about it? Last year Medford was represented by only one pupil, while this year we have as far as the Mexican border and southern Canada.

Charles Pratt said: "Seek the counsel of persons more experienced, then act on your own judgment."

Those who wish to enroll can do so at the Ashland chamber of commerce at 8 o'clock Monday morning, or for immediate information call 394-L, Mrs. Howard Barbo.

SOUTHERN OREGON GIRL EDITOR WINS COUPLE CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING PRIZE FOR TAMING KENTUCK FEUDIST

"I guess I have a right to bleed, I did 59 years ago," said Mrs. Baldwin at the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. George Baldwin, at their home on the Oregon Caves highway yesterday, when she was accused of blushing. The beautiful Episcopal double ring service was read by H. A. Percell of Medford, Evelyn Leonard and Louie Alright, grand-children of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, were the flower girls and little Charles McHadden, age 4, the only great-grandchild was the ring bearer. Mrs. Baldwin wore a dark blue afternoon gown of georgette. Mr. Baldwin had on the same white necktie he wore when he was married.

A sumptuous wedding dinner was served after the ceremony under a large maple tree in the front yard of the old homestead. A large wedding cake, with a spray of gold roses and this inscription, "Golden Wedding, July 5, 1929," on it, formed the center piece. The table was also decorated with sweet peas and roses. A number of gold pieces, a radio and many other gifts were given to the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin were married in Polk county, Ore., in 1870. Mr. Baldwin rode 18 miles on horseback on the Fourth of July to get the license. Mrs. Baldwin was formerly Cora Plumb. Her father's name was Forbe, whom the town was named after. Mrs. Baldwin has two brothers living, J. F. Plumb of Sacramento, Cal., and D. Plumb of Gervolito, Cal., who attended the function with their wives.

Mrs. J. L. McGraw came all the way from New Orleans, La., to attend her mother's golden wedding. The other children who were present were Mrs. R. Spencer and her husband, Mrs. Eva Peter, Raymond Baldwin, Holland, Mrs. C. C. Leonard and husband, and Mrs. E. R. Alright, Tachlona. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, after residing in different parts of Northern California, came to Oregon in 1899 and settled in the then extremely wild country of Sucker creek. The ranch they bought was surrounded with huge fir trees and Mr. Baldwin hewed a house out of them. The road by which the place was reached was hardly more than a trail and the 12 mile trip into the town of Kirby, by team and wagon, where they bought their supplies was a long day's trip. The Oregon Caves highway now is practically in front of their door and many cars pass by every day.

"It's not much like the old days when we had to walk five miles to school," said Mrs. Eva Peter, 592 South Newton street, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin. "Well, we've had plenty of rain but there has always been some sunshine," said Mrs. Baldwin, who is now 79 years old, when asked about the pioneering days. Mr. Baldwin is 82 but this couple, despite their old age, still are very active. Mrs. Baldwin can fruit and makes jellies and preserves the same as she did in the pioneering days and Mr. Baldwin still rides the range on horseback.

Humane Society THE UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

Kindness is a language the deaf can hear and the dumb can understand. As the children came trooping into a certain ward school one morning, the teacher noticed a "strange boy among them. She had him come to her, but he did not mind. Stepping down the aisle, she had her hand upon his head and looked kindly into his big blue eyes. He smiled brightly and spoke in Swedish. He could not understand a word of English. She gave him a place at her desk, set him some and practiced him on the common words and phrases at every odd moment. He would try a hundred times on a hard word if she made him to try; so he was soon able to do work in class. One day when he had finished his progress he said eagerly, his beautiful eyes shining with love, "your goodness makes things easy for me."

What would have happened if she had punished him when he could not understand? The result would, without doubt, have been very different. Can we not apply this little incident alike to our relations with those around us who do not seem to understand? Especially the animals under our care and those with whom we come in touch, should we try to teach through the universal language of kindness; a language which is understood by man and animals as well. It is simply practicing the Golden Rule, which is to love the weak and helpless.—From "Humane Education."

JACKSON COUNTY HUMANE SOCIETY

New Spread Materials Desiderable spread fabrics are just beginning to be popular. Several hostesses of note have introduced them into their summer homes, matching them with ruffled curtains. A well known linen store predicts that they will lead the lighter types of spread in the coming summer. They are shown in white, in white with colored dots, and in solid colors. They come with frills or with scalloped edges, and cost from $3.75 up, the finer quality being in the neighborhood of $7.

Another favored fabric for bedspreads is mohair, which makes practical all-year-round coverings. They are not too light in effect for a winter ensemble, nor too dressy for the summer room. The material has a crisp, homespun quality and comes in plain colors with multi-colored borders in uneven stripings. These mohair spreads are also tub-proof and sun-proof, and curtains to match are to be had in all shades.

TOKYO.—(AP)—Scientists of the war department and of the department of Agriculture and Forestry claim to have found a smoke screen that effectively protects mulberry trees against frost. Army planes are used to spread the smoke, which is especially valuable for the silk producing sections of central Japan.

* * * A VANITY CASE SERMON. "Say not thou, What is the cause that I prosper? For I have been better than these? For thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this."—Eccles. 7:10. "Not only do not say it but do not think it—not if you want to keep young. It is a sure mark of an aging spirit, this bewailing and bemoaning the past. And when you let yourself "thing old," your face commences to look old. As soon as a woman finds herself thinking that "the former days were better than these," she may know that the world is getting ahead of her. Before long she will become a "back number," and look the part.

Really, it is a happy accident, not a disaster, that time blots out or dims the memory of our sun-trying ordeals and deepens the roseate glow that envelops the bright spots in the "dear, dead days" of which melancholy poets love to sing. But when we let the happiness of the past spoil the joys of the present, we turn what was meant to be a blessing into a curse.

Granting that there were many happy days in the long ago, granted that the sun shone yesterday and last week and last year, are you sure it is not shining today? All the warmth and joy and beauty that heaven has to send down to earth were not sent "When you and I were young, Maggie." Ask the young people of today. No, the difference between the past and the present is not in the relative amount of cloud and sunshine. It is in whether you are thinking old or thinking young.

Beware, then, of thinking old. For, if you think old, you will look old despite of all you vainly can do for it. And the very oldest thought that you can think is, "What is the cause that the former days were better than these?"—Nellie S. Russell.

Experiment With Varieties For your first year it is a good plan to try out several varieties, some hardy and some tender. After experimenting a season or two, you can invest in some of the more expensive kinds, as you will have become quite expert by then. There are many varieties of water lilies listed, but in general the Hardy Mollie varieties are most satisfactory.

Care should be taken about allowing too much running water to enter the pool when water lilies are grown; they do not like a sudden change of temperature. It is best, unaccounted to, raise water lilies under a flowering fountain. If your pool has a fountain it should be turned on in the evening but not allowed to run continually.

The planting about the pool should consist of plants generally found near the water edges. Shrubs and evergreens of a graceful habit can be used to advantage.
