

MARRYING MOOD MOTIF FOR PLAY ON COPCO RADIO

Andrew Dallaire was in the marrying mood, and whether it was a chorus girl or a daughter of an aristocratic family made little difference—Andrew was in the mood. Around this theme of "The Bride," two-act playlet written by Mary Greiner, and presented by the Copco Players last night over KMED.

Andrew and his sister, Martha, were descendants of one of the oldest families of Townsend, and lived in the Dallaire home, at one time one of the most stately in the town, but now rapidly deteriorating, as Martha refused to have any modern conveniences or repairs. Earl Davis impersonated Andrew, and Jo Murray hosted the aristocratic Martha, who deflected chorus girls, and thought Andrew should marry an aristocrat—a member of one of the older families.

Dolly, the chorus girl whom Andrew picked out as his bride, was to be "educated" in the ways of the elite of Townsend. This part was taken by Mary Greiner, Johnny Jessup, the aviator-electrician, whom Dolly seemed to like in particular, was characterized by Harry Gould.

Because the Lucens, an old family who formerly lived in Townsend were returning, Martha thought it best that Andrew should call the wedding off. Miss Dolly stepped into the room at that time and said she wished to have the marriage broken, as she was to marry Johnny Jessup as soon as her parents, the Lucens, arrive for the wedding. Then it was that Martha and Andrew discovered that Dolly was a Lucen, an aristocrat, although known to them by her stage name only.

Andrew had been a Quaker girl that he liked—Quaker Darling, and maybe she would have him—Andrew was in the marrying mood.

1909 Copy Medford Morning Mail Has Bliton's Editorial Swan Song and Boosting Spirit of Early Day

Spurred on by reading of the "Ten and Twenty Years Ago" column of the Medford Morning Mail yesterday, Bliton yesterday moved from his archives the issue of Sunday, October 21, 1909, in which Mr. Bliton, now of the California Oregon Power company, sang his swan song as editor. The paper, then the "Medford Morning Mail," was amalgamated with the "Medford Tribune."

The editorial among other things says: "The Mail made some friends and some enemies—and all have prospered to some extent through its efforts. To its friends, we have only this to say, we are glad of their prosperous condition; and to its enemies, we don't give a whoop. If they have prospered, it wasn't our fault."

Mr. Bliton also editorially walked out of town, as some may have predicted, and intends to live in Medford the rest of his days.

The leading article on the front page announced that J. R. Blackburn of Cripple Creek, Colo., was going to build a smelter at the Blue Lodge mine and if "John H. Allen don't build an electric road, my people or their associates will."

In another front page article, N. P. Curry of Boston, Mass., declared in an interview that in the east he met people who had never heard of Portland, but knew all about Medford. He said while on a hunting trip in the wilds of West Virginia he talked with an old guide who ranted on about Medford for an hour, though he had never been there.

Mr. Curry assured the Medford Morning Mail "the outburst dumbfounded me." The other local news concerned the frustration of an attempted robbery of a drunk man, by Policeman Frank Murdoch; 29 Hindus had arrived to work on the P. & E. railroad, and H. D. Foster had just completed a map of Crater Lake.

The national news told of Oregon setting two more congressional seats, and the death of scientist, Dr. Cook had climbed Mount McKinley, as he said he did.

The Southern Oregon orchards, were displaying a 118-pound pumpkin, and Miss Cordelia Goff entertained the high school seniors at a Halloween party. R. W. Stearns, as "deek, pee lem," informed all Woodmen there would be a social time the first Friday in November.

The Hutchinson company reports "a new condemnation of women's wearables, at big town prices." Another advertisement reads: "Russell's for good candy. Look 'em up and be conquered."

A personal item says: "Frank Farrell, Ralph Burgess, Paul McDonald and Sheldon Hill, who attended the Ashland football game, reported it was a peach."

During the course of this sound picture, three theme songs are sung, one of which, "The Wedding of the Painted Doll," is given a true musical comedy presentation. From "The Broadway Melody," one learns something of the possibilities of the film musical comedy.

A heavy dew in the mountains last night and the cooler weather has slightly improved the forest fire menace throughout this district, at least temporarily. No fires were reported up to early this afternoon in either the State National forest or on state protected land.

A small fire on state land, one and a half miles southeast of Phoenix yesterday afternoon had burned two acres of grass before it was gotten under control some time later by the people of that neighborhood, the four state land fire fighters, who had been summoned at once when the fire began spreading, reaching the scene just as it was about over.

It is understood that this fire originated from a pile of trash a woman was burning close to her ranch home and which spread to the grass.

SMALLPOX ATTACKS FIVE IN ONE FAMILY

Six cases of smallpox have been reported in the county, by Dr. L. H. Inskip, former county physician, within two days. Five of these are within one family in Medford, and the sixth one is out on the Kings Highway, according to the physician.

Two weeks ago, Dr. Inskip reported a single case of smallpox in the city, to the local health unit. The case occurred in a family of six children. Yesterday, the other five came down with the disease all at one time.

A trainload of tractors filling 70 cars recently was received in Regina, Saskatchewan, for farmers of that vicinity.

Boleman, who is spending this week in that city in attendance at the American Medical association convention, as follows:

"Dr. Emily F. Boleman, Medford, medical director Jackson County health unit—The life of a medical director is a happy one when there is behind the organization a group of lay workers an splendid and devoted as the one we have in Medford.
