STEELHEAD RUN NEAR END SAYS COLEMAN

The steelhead run in Rogue river is about at an end, according to Deputy Game Warden William S. Coleman, who also predicts that the Rogue river "will be the lowest in the history of civilization before winter has come again." Warden Coleman reports that the river is receding by "leaps and bounds."

The Von der Hellen gravel pit has ceased the flow of muddy water into the river, a happening that excited the sportsmen of Grants Pass, who said it was muddying the great fishing stream and polluting their water supply. Rogue river is now flowing to the sea in its natural purity, and the fishing is nothing to rave about.
