9 VICTIMS ARE TAKEN FROM CAR

Wrecking Crews Remove Bodies in All-Night Effort — Scores Aboard Train Suffered Injury — Heavy Engines Passed Over Weakened Bridge Without Difficulty.

DENVER, July 19.—(AP) Wrecking crews at work throughout the night at the scene of yesterday's wreck of a Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad train three miles east of Stratton, Colo., failed to discover any additional bodies in the submerged Pullman, Rock Island officials at Goodland, Kans. this morning advised the Associated Press. The death list now stands at nine persons—seven white persons and two negro porters.

Scores of the more than 100 passengers aboard the train were injured and were taken to the hospitals throughout this region. Passengers on the train said that most of them were awake when the accident occurred. A few minutes before the train, west bound, had pulled into a siding to permit the passage of the east-bound train over the same tracks. The eastbound train passed over the flood weakened bridge without trouble, just 45 minutes before the disaster to the west bound train. The dawn was breaking as the train sped westward, at an estimated speed of 45 miles an hour.

Engineer M. V. Ryan of Colorado Springs, Colo., a veteran of 25 years service on the Rock Island, and pilot of the head engine of the doubleheader said the engines crossed the bridge safely. The bridge gave way as the rear wheels of the baggage car passed over it. "The Cape Horn" was completely submerged and the Pullman next in line had its front section submerged. The rest of the 13 coaches in the train were strewn about the prairie. Ryan disconnected his engine from the baggage car, and raced it to Vona, four miles away, where he reported the accident, returning immediately to aid in the rescue work.

Morris Gest, New York theatrical producer, gave a graphic account of the wreck. The producer, attired in a pair of nondescript trousers and the lavender silk coat of his pajamas, arrived in Denver last night.

E. J. Perry of New Bedford, Mass., the only survivor of the passengers in the death car, was awake when the car plunged into the water. He made his escape by breaking through a window in the car, and was carried a half mile down the stream from the shore before he could reach the shore of the 50-foot wide stream.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—(AP)—Benjamin Lewis of Memphis, Tenn., learned of the death of his wife and son, Henry Lewis, 11, who died in the Rock Island wreck near Stratton, Colo., when he arrived here last night.

Mrs. Lewis, who was 42, her son, and Mrs. Lewis' aunt, Mrs. Jennie Foltz, also killed, left Memphis Tuesday on a train. Mr. Lewis and two sons, Benjamin, 17, and 12, started west in a motor car the next day expecting to join the others in Colorado Springs.

Henry's wish for his first train ride caused the three to go by train instead of automobile, Mr. Lewis said. He said he would leave for Stratton today.
