SCHULER BUYS 55 ACRE SHAW FARM IN BELLVIEW DIST.

BELLVIEW, Ore., July 26.—(Special.) E. B. Shaw sold his 55 acre tract of improved property to I. E. Schuler of Medford for a consideration of approximately $20,000. This is one of the largest transactions to take place in Bellview for some time. Mr. Shaw has purchased a ranch on Butte creek where he and the Barnes family expect to make their home. It is not definitely known at this time who will take charge of the Shaw place in Bellview.

Mrs. R. C. Goodman entertained at her home on Union street Tuesday with a 1 o'clock Dutch luncheon, in honor of her sister, Mrs. C. C. Crowson and daughter Clarice of Klamath Falls, and Mrs. Claud Phillips of Bay City, Calif. The guest list included beside the guests of honor, Mrs. W. L. Huxley, Mrs. James Sewell, Mrs. Mark True, Mrs. Jesse Neil and Mrs. W. D. Jackson.

William Bryan who is employed on the railroad at Hornbrook is spending a few days at his home in Bellview.

Mrs. Bessie Hibbs and son George of Oakland, Calif., are returning to their home Monday, after spending two weeks visiting Mrs. Hibbs' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus King.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brown of Klamath Falls, spent Tuesday visiting at the home of Earl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown.

Miss Anna Meisner of Canyonville, Ore., is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Martain. Miss Meisner was a former Bellview girl.

PHOENIX GROWERS MARKET CHICKENS

EDEN PRECINCT, July 26.—(Special.)—Mr. Parker of Phoenix sold a couple of hundred young Rhode Island Red chickens last Monday to parties to raise for broilers and hens to keep. Mrs. Lena Stevens sold a lot of young roosters last Saturday to Swift & Company.

Dr. Stannard occupied the pulpit at the Phoenix church last Sunday in the absence of Rev. Johnson, who was attending the conference.

Mrs. Mary Doaborg and Mrs. E. O. Rease of Sacramento are spending a few days visiting at the home of each of their parents in the valley.

Mrs. Henry Hanscom and her daughter, Mrs. Foote, of Medford, were in Talent last Tuesday visiting Mrs. Hanscom's sister, Mrs. Abbott.

Miss Elinora Sheets is a pupil in the beginners' piano class which Mrs. E. E. Gore is teaching, alone with a good number which have taken up this work.

Mr. and Mrs. George Parker were pleasant callers at the home of your correspondent on Tuesday evening.

Sylvester Stevens, who has been spending his vacation with his mother in north Talent, left the last of this week to resume his position with a lumber company near Portland.

CLIMAX PARTY HOLDS PICNIC AT LOST LAKE

CLIMAX, July 26.—(Special)—A party of 18 young people of the neighborhood spent Friday night at Lost creek, near here.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Wertz and Elvira Blair were dinner guests at the Compton home Wednesday.

Mrs. K. N. Compton is enjoying a visit from Durwood Livesay, her brother. Mr. Livesay motored down from Olympia, Wash.

Mrs. W. F. Charley spent Sunday afternoon at the Wertz home.

N. P. Hanson and Mrs. Wertz made a hurried business trip to Medford Monday.

A. J. Grissom has been busy for some time with haying. This weather is ideal for the farmers.

Owen Austin has been working for L. H. Wertz and Herb Grissom.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Wertz entertained the following at dinner Tuesday evening: Mrs. K. H. Compton and sons, Carl and Joe, Durwood Livesay, Owen Austin and Evelino Charley.

Mr. DeFord of Ashland drove a band of sheep through here Wednesday.

Mrs. K. H. Compton and sons and brother, Mr. Livesay, motored to Crater lake Sunday.

BELLVIEW BOY COOKS DEMONSTRATE AT FAIR

BELLVIEW, Ore., July 26.—(Special) — Everett Newbry and Leonard Simpson have been chosen from the Bellview camp cooking class to participate in the demonstration during the county fair.

Miss Louise Homes, superintendent of the Weed Hospital spent a few days visiting with Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Tucker, also her grandmother in Bellview.

Mrs. T. A. Merryman returned home on Friday after spending a month visiting relatives and friends at Portland, Seattle and Newport.

For the Love of a Lady

by Jeffery Farnol

SYNOPSIS: Sir Richard reappears at the inn, wearing a cunningly contrived disguise that accounts for his late disappearance from the scene. Through the index of the secret room, Richard hears Viscount Brocklehurst and Titus Oldcraft plot—a villainous plan that concerns the girl Richard loves. Unseen eyes watch Oldcraft take a note—Julian's last message to his cousin, Richard—from the barrel of a pistol which Julian had entrusted to Doctor Samson. Two furtive figures follow Oldcraft along the road, drawing ever closer closer closer.

Chapter 29

A CURIOUS ROBBERY

A soft and fragrant dawn glowed in the many bright lattices of the Guyfford Arms and upon the face of him in the stable-yard, that same gypsy-seeming fellow, Dick Fullalove. The man in the stable-yard having yawned once, yawned again, stretching long arms luxuriously, but, all at once, his white teeth shut with a snap and he stared away across the village green where stood the parish stocks—for there, with long legs fast shut within this instrument of shame, sat a prisoner, his upper parts hidden from sight by an enveloping sack.

So the man Fullalove, shambled

London's greatest constable—a prisoner—in the village stocks!

over to the stocks and stood there—goggling.

"Hul-loa!" quoth he, at last, whereupon issued an answering bleat from the pinioned, sack-shrouded form.

"Lemme . . . out!" gasped a strangled voice.

"'Ow?" enquired Fullalove and scratched his ear, then turned as Joel Bim, the blacksmith, came striding across the green.

"Love us!" exclaimed the blacksmith. "I knows them legs."

"Pretty long 'uns!" nodded Fullalove.

"But if," said the blacksmith, "if so be it do be 'im as I thinks it be—'ow did 'e come into they stocks?"

"Ar!" nodded Fullalove. "'Ow?"

"Ad us better take a look at 'im, do 'ee think?" inquired Joel. Fullalove nodded and proceeded to unknot constricting rope and, tugging off the sack, discovered the passion-contorted features of Master Titus Oldcraft.

"Love us all!" ejaculated the blacksmith, while Oldcraft, wrenching open coat and waistcoat, drew thence large pocket-book, opened it, glanced through its contents:

"Robbed!" cried he. "The villains robbed me!"

"Ay, but," demurred the cautious Joel, "oo put 'ee in?"

"Two rogues, two damned villains . . . and robbed me!"

Now at this moment, forth of the inn stepped Tom Pitt, beholding whom, Oldcraft called and beckoned, whereat Tom Pitt hastened up.

"Call your master, rouse my lord Brocklehurst—say I'm robbed—important papers—go!"

So away sped Pitt, leaving Oldcraft to fume and fret while Joel Bim scratched his head and stared at Dick Fullalove, who rasped his chin and gaped at Joel Bim.

"The key!" snarled Oldcraft, jerking his pinioned legs impatiently. "Don't stand there like two posts—look for the key!"

"Ay, but wheer?" inquired the smith.

"Look anywhere—everywhere!" cried Oldcraft. "Oh here's a guinea to the man as gets me out!"

"A guinea, by Gales!" said the smith. "Lookee now, why, the key be in the lock!"

"Then unlock me!"

"Guinea first, maister!"

So Oldcraft tossed him the guinea and Joel rubbed the coin, stared at it and nodded to Fullalove. "Here be 'alf for thee, lad," said he, and proceeded to unlock and free the prisoner who hastened across to the inn door and forth thereat stepped Viscount Brocklehurst in silken dressing-robe.

"What now?" cried he in voice shrill and querulous. "What's this I hear? Tell me what's to do?"

"Last night, my lord," answered Oldcraft, "I was waylaid outside the doctor's house. I was strangled, trussed, tied, clapped i' the stocks and—robbed."

"Ha, your purse, your watch?"

"No my lord, all the villains got off w' was the cat's-eye ring and—another paper as I found last night i' the barrel of the late Mr. Julian Guyfford's pistol—"

Viscount Brocklehurst leapt up as if he had been stabbed! "Julian's pistol? Are ye sure?"

"So Doctor Samson tells me, my lord." And Master Oldcraft laid the pistol on the rustic table.

"The . . . the pistol!" gasped the Viscount, "you say there was a . . . a paper hid in't?"

"Ay, my lord, writing as I could make no sense of nor the doctor either—in the barrel of the pistol."

"And what of this paper? Where is it?" demanded the Viscount. "And you read it, man, you read it through—what did it say—what?"

"Words, my lord, words a-plenty, too many to bear in mind, wild words as made no sense——" Here Master Oldcraft gasped, for the Viscount was shaking him in fierce grip:

"To whom was it written?"

"To his cousin, my lord, to Sir Richard."

"Did it mention any names?"

"None, my lord, none but Sir Richard's."

"But why," cried the Viscount with passionate gesture, "why should these thieves steal your papers only—why? What manner o' rogues were they?"

"Ah, my lord, 'twas dark and the devilish pair went masked——"

"Ha, but two, ye say—two only and you armed!"

"True enough, sir," answered Oldcraft sullenly, "but they were devilish quick; they had me nigh strangled afore I could so much as cry out. I'm pretty sure I might know 'em again—or one on 'em."

"How—did they speak, then?"

"Nary a word, my lord."

"Then what—what a plague d'ye mean?"

"My lord, the chiefest rogue whistled softly through his teeth, below his breath."

The Viscount leapt to his feet, laughed shrilly, beating the air with his fists.

"Fool!" cried he. "'Through his teeth,' says you; 'below his breath!' then I tell you this was Guyfford himself . . . 'twas Sir Richard Guyfford or may I perish!" And with sudden, wild gesture the Viscount rose and was gone into the inn.

* * * * *

In certain small, windowless chamber a candle glimmered, by whose beam Sir Richard, elbows on table and head in hands, sat deep in study of the paper before him, a somewhat crumpled sheet, whereon were words hastily penned yet closely written, these:

"Cousin Dick devils haunt me. Death creeps on me, when you read this I shall be dead by the hands of one of three or three together. Yet may my murderer be known since living, I do hold his life in my grasp. And yet, because this message may never reach thee, Dick, since they seek it to destroy and with this the manifest proofs of their guilt, needs must I set thee a riddle. As thus. The ruined mill was oft-times our boyish playground, now is Death hid there to trap damned villainy. Opposite the day the 24 from going old and in. Learn what hours thee up. Seek, find and avenge me, Rick in memory of better days gone by. For with Death upon me, with none to succour and no escape, I turn to thee, and now declare I do forgive and crave thy forgiveness because of the times we played as little lads and kissed each other blood right. For me is now farewell to all things earthly, so in a space I do kiss thee a long a long. Good night, cousin Dick, and now fare thee well."

(Copyright, 1928, Jefery Farnol)

This vague, puzzling note holds the secret key which will bring happiness to Sir Richard—and Helen D'Arcy. Continue the story in tomorrow's chapter.

Buck Freeman in 1899 belted out 25 home runs. Until 1919, when Babe Ruth scored 27, no player had equaled that record.
