

FINE LEVIED FOR SMOKE IN FOREST RESTRICTED AREA

Smokers must be very careful in what sections of Crater National forest they smoke, else they are liable to discovery and apprehension by a forest ranger and being taken up to United States court in Portland for a fine or other punishment.

It cost Bob Ede, a Kirk, Ore., resident, who is employed in a neighboring lumber mill, just $5 to smoke a cigarette recently in a restricted area closed to smokers in Crater National forest, as a fine for that sum was imposed on him in United States court last Wednesday by Judge McNary.

There are other Crater National forest areas closed to smoking during the fire season, including the following:

Algoma timber sale area, Pelican Lumber Co. sale area, Owen-Oregon Lumber Co. area, Moon sale area, Varney creek area, Tolman creek sale area and Crystal creek sale area.

BIG BUCK IS VISITOR GLEN ROSA ORCHARD

A big buck deer in the Glen Rosa orchard, three miles from Medford on the Jacksonville highway, which was seen this morning by Ray Chapin and Clarence Ramsey, when propping trees in the orchard, was the first reported so near the city for some time.

The animal was only a few trees from the men, and after going a short distance, turned and looked at them, then ambled toward the hills, according to Miss Grace Chapin.

For the Love of a Lady

Chapter 24. A PLOT FRUSTRATED. Upon a step deep-set in leafy hedge sat two men, black as night, who were black as night.

"Sunset, Jonas!" said one, leaning to peer down the lane. "Sunset, Jonas, and she is high doo, I reckon! Get 'ee down and stand by w' the cloak; 'twunt do to let 'er squeak."

"She ain't agoin' to do no squeakin' once I gets my 'ands on 'er, Will, not she!"

"Then, the better to listen, they stood mute in that place of deepening shadows, vigilantly alert, while from dry ditch at no great distance a pair of keen eyes curly, gypsy-black hair, a face that, stirred memory, was to follow her, tobing and haunt her slumbers.

Captain Despard had manifested an unwonted restlessness all day. Towards sunset, Mr. Titus Oldcraft rode up to the inn and haberd the captain's comely, bow-legged head leading forth in the lattice above.

"You dispatched your mission?" inquired the captain. "You bring me a message—a letter, perhaps?"

"Sir, I do," answered Mr. Oldcraft, "but first may I recited you as there was promised a small honorarium, a mere—"

"A bribe, Mr. Oldcraft, of 25 guineas to carry a letter to Viscount Brocklehurst since I knew not where to find him," said the captain, and tossed a purse on the table.

"Oldcraft glared defiance, counted the coins, and handed over an envelop. At the captain's command, he sullenly left the room.

Despard carefully read the letter, then called the landlord, John. "Landlord, read me this letter—aloud!"

So John took the letter and read as follows:

"I fear no man leaving, (tast of any yourself, I will meet you tonight about 10 o'clock at the Old Mill. We can settle our business by lantern-light—"

"John, you gather the meaning—his lordship and I are to fight a duel."

"But, sir—your bad arm?"

"Why, yes," murmured the captain, "it's probable he counts on this, yet it shall not prevent me killing him, I hope. But listen, my good John. Now should I return to my room, I should be dead on the place by sword or bullet, why 'tis very well. But—should I have vanished, friend John, then shall you search the Old Mill for my dog, that ghostly pool, quest amid the underbrush. Should my corpse be found in either place—you will surely know my murderer;—this letter shall be sufficient proof. So this letter you will take charge of and guard carefully."

"Why... so I will, sir," answered John, shaking troubled head, bowed himself out and straightway hid him along certain narrow passages and up secret stair to small, windowless chamber.

"Lord love you, Sir Richard, such despatch, bloody business!" quoth John, and placing the letter on the table, recounted the whole matter.

TABLE ROCK BUSY HOG BUYERS BUSY

TABLE ROCK, Ore., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—Parties from Medford were through here Thursday in search of feeder hogs, which they report to be very scarce in the valley.

The last few days of sweltering weather have been very oppressive to horses and harvest workers.

Frank Hart has sold his second crop of alfalfa to Mr. and Mrs. Hardman.

The Wright combine has finished harvesting the barley crop on the Morris ranch, which is reported as much lighter than usual.

G. C. Niswender of Medford was a business visitor here Wednesday. He had just returned from Sprague River in Klamath county, where he constructed a house for Mel Atkins.

Those seeking relief from the heat wave find a sharp contrast in the cooling waters of the Rogue.

TABLE ROCK, Ore., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—Miss Cannon of Medford was here Sunday interviewing parties in behalf of the Oregon Historical society.

Mr. Cannon claims that according to army officers' reports which give descriptions of lands surrounding and distances in miles, the place where the Indian treaty was signed would be on the south side of Rogue river near what is now the Whitestone ranch.

TABLE ROCK, Ore., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—Among some of the things country school board members do not agree to do when assuming office is the entertaining of agents and high pressure salesmen on a busy day and listening to them tell of things so vitally essential to the school that one is apt to wonder how we have managed to carry on "up to now" without them.

Although several salesmen have been in contact with the local school board, none have been successful in selling their wares.

The board has taken the attitude of deciding themselves on what they want and also on where they get it.
