

KANSAS PEN HAS MUTINY TWO KILLED

Prisoners Stage Daring Break For Liberty—Long Termers Are Shot By Guards—Three Captured After Escape—Use Fellow Convicts As Shields Against Bullets.

LANSING, Kas., Aug. 6.—(AP)—A daring break for liberty at the state penitentiary here late yesterday cost two long term prisoners their lives and sent a third to the prison hospital with a fractured skull. One guard was wounded.

The dead were William Wells, 35, and Robert Collins, 29. J. E. Knight received a fractured skull in a hand to hand encounter with R. H. Hudspeth, deputy warden. W. L. Hodstop, the guard, was shot in the left leg.

Three other prisoners who made the break for freedom were captured two hours later in the Lansing stockyards less than half a mile from the prison. They were John Edwards, alias L. E. Jenkins, 33; O. G. Shultz, 35, and Charles Cheatham, 37. All the men were serving terms ranging from 15 years to life.

The break occurred at 4 p. m. when the men were brought out of the prison coal mine. The first of approximately 400 convicts to reach the surface, they produced pistols that presumably had been smuggled in to them and captured four unarmed guards and four other prisoners whom they used as a shield against bullets to gain a gate in the prison wall. The convicts forced the gate and emerged in the open to be met with a fusillade of shots from a sentry.

Rogue River Valley Has Opportunity As Egg and Poultry Producing Area; Westerfield Points Out Advantages

By N. C. Westerfield.
(Author of "Fifty Years With Poultry")

When the products produced in any locality are of sufficient quantity to demand a premium in the large consuming markets of the world, then the products produced in the nearby territory, then, that locality whose quality predominates as an asset looked upon as a favorable locality for the growing of such products.

Eggs from the Pacific northwest which includes Oregon, Washington and portions of Idaho, have earned in the great consuming centers of the country, even along the entire Atlantic coast, more than two thousand miles from the point of production, the enviable position of being the highest quality eggs being sold in any of the eastern markets and actually command a premium over locally produced eggs.

Ordinarily a long journey across the continent will lower the quality of eggs, not so with Oregon and Washington eggs. Even then, the handicap of distance has no terrors for the poultrymen of the Pacific northwest.

There is no doubt that climatical conditions are exceedingly favorable for the production of quality eggs, eggs that are properly soiled with clean, well-knit shells which protect the contents and permit long distance transportation without deterioration and the very fact that eggs from the Pacific northwest do arrive in the eastern markets in prime condition and sell at a premium, is ample proof that we owe much to a favorable climate.

It often occurs that the people of a given locality are not aware of the advantages possessed by their own section and fail to take advantage of all that natural advantages offer and therefore fail to capitalize, or take advantage of their rightful heritage.

Some people even doubt and refuse to believe that their locality really does possess such advantages and for these doubting Thomases we will offer a little proof and this proof comes from the university of a great state, whose poultrymen are compelled to meet the competition of our western eggs, even though these eggs have gone through the ordeal of a long haul clear across the continent yet, in the face of the strongest competition are sold in the exacting markets, to the shrewdest buyers in the world, yet those eggs have a higher nutritive value and quickly sell at a premium.

A letter was recently sent out by the University of New York telling their people how our western eggs are taking the place of eggs produced in that state, or rather preferred before their own, and actually close the article with words something like this: "We must admit that their splendid position has been gained through quality."

What more do we want to convince ourselves that right here in the Rogue River valley of Oregon is the very locality where we can produce eggs of quality that sell anywhere in the world after their value has been established and sell at a premium.

Another and a very important matter is the character of the feed used to produce these eggs. No place in the United States have we given more careful study to the kind of feed we need to produce quality eggs. It has been found that we must first feed our hens in such a manner as to produce a perfect state of health, pure blood to make high quality eggs. We cannot stress the importance of pure feed too strongly. Here in the Pacific northwest poultrymen have been drilled upon this subject and all know the tremendous importance of pure feed.

Over Production
Where quality is so pronounced that a premium is readily paid by discriminating consumers of our eastern cities, one need have no fear of over-production of such products, especially those produced in a favorable locality, such as we have here, for the world will literally beat a path to the doors of such producers.
