IT PROTECTS SEA-GOING PEOPLE, this lighthouse on the rocky cliffs of England does. This is an unusual picture of Beachy Head lighthouse, guardian of the cliffs near Eastbourne.

THE MATLANDS—new poses of Lieutenant Lester Matland, Hawaiian flyer, his wife, and young daughter, Patricia, are shown here.

PIQUANT PERSONALITY OF PATSY, RUTH MILLER lends beauty and zest to all her movie productions—and has added thousands to her list of admirers. This seems an unusually charming glimpse of Miss Miller.

THIS IS A FLYING HANGAR. The big tri-motored Ford transport plane used on tours also serves as a hangar for the little ship at night. And it is easily noticed that there is quite a difference in size between the two planes.

SUCH EYES! No wonder Mrs. Sand Owl and her little ones see so well at night. Former Nebraskans, they're in a Milwaukee zoo now.

JUST STRETCHING A BIT—that's what "Spottail" is doing with its owner, Miss Alice M. Sisty of Plainsville, N. J., up. A long rail trip from the 101 Ranch at Marland, Okla., proved a bit strenuous, you know.

HE CAN'T SHOOT THIS MARBLE, even though Sonny Albany, of Philadelphia, happens to be marble champion. Sonny was perched on this push ball after he had given an exhibition to poor kids and orphans during an outing.

THIS UNUSUAL POSE OF LILA LEE emphasizes the talented young actress' beauty which has so captivated patrons of the "talkies." She's one of the screen's most popular misses.

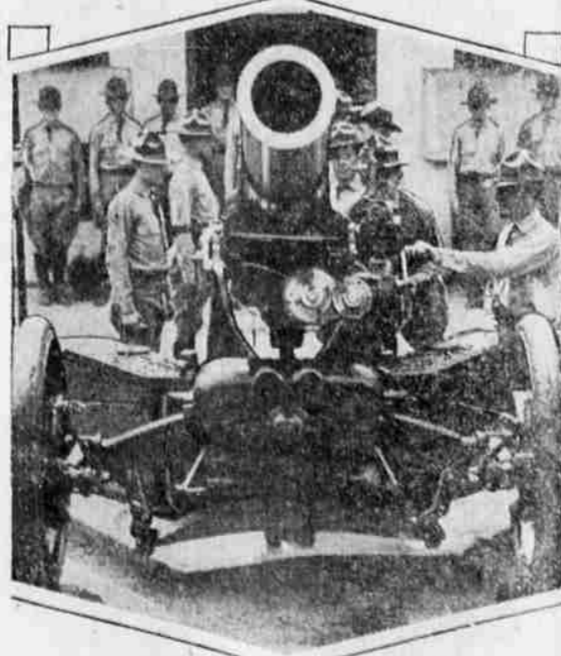

IT'S FLIRTATION WITH DEATH to attempt a journey on the snowfields of Mt. Rainier. Snowslides, slippery packs, and dangerous crevasses all signal danger but, in all, it fails to distract from the beauty of the peaks.

PRIZE-SEEKERS in the national air races are Miss Bobbie Trout, above, twice holder of the women's altitude record, and Marvel Croston, below, holder of the record now. And they're nifty-looking flyers, eh?

SAY EINSTEIN—and immediately one thinks of involved mathematical equations that very, very few understand. Yet this convinces one that the noted German scientist finds time to enjoy a moment of play as well as other men.

SERIOUS BUSINESS, this is, even though it wouldn't be nice at all to have this 155-millimeter field piece fired right at you. These West Point cadets are learning all about the manipulation and firing of this war machinery.

A CUTE MASCOT is Helen Stone Devine, 4-year-old daughter of a Fort Meyer, Calif., army officer. She's the official pet of the summer soldiers, and regular ones, too.

A HOSS RACE IN GERMANY—and what do you think of it? Bodies are wooden tubs, a board shapes the head, a pom pom makes the tail. Fun it is—and if you don't believe it, try it.
