

MARKETING AID WILL BE SOUGHT FOR PRODUCERS

Jackson County Rural and Urban Bodies Join Hands

To Solve Problems of Farmer — Crop Survey Also Discussed.

Marketing problems faced by the farmers of Jackson county and plans for a cover alliance of the producer and the market were the main subjects of discussion at the meeting of local cities and rural districts last night at the Hotel Medford. These problems are to be studied by a group representing the chambers of commerce and the granges of the county.

Last night's meeting was originally called for the purpose of discussing the proposed agricultural survey of the county and considerable time was given to this matter. Officials of the granges as well as chamber executives outlined the plan and gave points for and against the survey.

Paul V. Maris, head of the extension service of Oregon State college, was present at the meeting and spoke interestingly upon the proposed survey. He told of similar projects on in other sections of the state, their advantages and disadvantages. Mr. Maris is of the opinion that, while a survey of the Rogue River valley crops would prove valuable for prospective settlers as well as for farmers now living here, it would be an expense. He pointed out that a comprehensive survey would be included in the United States census of 1930.

In addition to this census valuable surveys are made each year by irrigation districts of Medford, Talent and Eagle Point. Last year a complete survey of the industries of Lane county was made for the Eugene chamber of commerce by faculty members and students of the University of Oregon. This has proven immensely valuable, Eugene officials report.

"A continuous market for the farmer is his big need just now," declared Professor Maris. "The farmer now has to depend too much upon chance as to markets," he continued. If the county decides to go ahead with the survey this year, Professor Maris stated that an effort would be made to arrange the work so that Oregon State college can cooperate.

Further discussion regarding the survey will be brought up at the meeting called for August 21, when the chairman of each grange's marketing committee will get together with the chamber of commerce secretaries.

Attending last night's meeting were: R. G. Fowler, county agent, who acted as temporary chairman of the meeting; R. T. Seaman, Pomona grange and Eagle Point irrigation company; L. P. Wilcox, county horticultural agent; H. T. Pankey, Central Point chamber of commerce; George W. Dunn, Ashland; C. T. Baker and C. A. Swigart, Medford chamber of commerce; W. Beebe, Central Point grange; Theo. P. Tolleson, Central Point chamber of commerce; A. C. Mattlestadt, Eagle Point grange; Theodore Sims, Jackson ville grange; Clay D. Parker, Farmers' Exchange Co-operative; and E. Reed, Live Oak grange.

YOUNG WOMEN WERE DUPES OF PROMINENT DRY

Rev. James Empringham Conducted Medical Examinations of Girls In Scanty Attire Is Claim—Grave Charges Filed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The Daily News said today in a copyrighted story that "grave charges" involving the practice of medicine without authority and supported by complaints of young women parishioners, had been made against the Rev. James Empringham, national secretary of the church temperance society. The charges were made by Dr. S. Dana Hubbard, chief of the city health department's legal bureau, and were filed with Bishop William T. Manning and other officials of the Episcopal church, the paper declared.

Activities of the now defunct Health Educational society of which Dr. Empringham was national superintendent, were concerned in the report.

The charges were said by the News to have been based, in part, upon alleged medical examinations of young women in scanty attire.

RENO, Nev., Aug. 15.—(AP)—James Empringham, believed to be the national secretary of the Church Temperance society, and former superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon league, obtained a divorce here last June from Ethel M. Empringham on the ground of desertion. He denied that he was "the" Empringham, but names and facts of marriage were identical as given in the divorce complaint with those of Rev. Empringham. Empringham's attorney said today he had not seen his former client since the day of the trial and did not know whether he was still in Nevada or not.

standard rations and 14 days on emergency rations. Even then, there would be a surplus of rice. Captain Sir George Hubert Wilkins is one of the greatest living experts on polar life and in an emergency could prove an invaluable guide, probably taking charge of the expedition from the moment of debarkation.

Outside districts must finance themselves, build their own pipe lines from city limits, assume their own risks, collections, upkeep and extensions. Being quantity users, they obtain outside meter rates and are required to sign a contract for surplus water only, although it is contemplated that their water rental would be so important to the city in future years that they would have no desire to cut them off, as any well balanced city system will always have a large surplus of water at night time.

Can Build Another Pipe Line
"The city has not doubled in population since 1910, but assuming that it will double its present population within the next twenty years, it would then be too large to safely depend upon a single pipeline 3 1/2 miles long from the springs to the city, and service would demand a double supply line by that time."
