He was very sympathetic with the peasant class in their struggle against royalty and because of articles he published in his paper, a price was set on his head. But he had many friends among the Russian legislators so a wrong description of him was printed and for three years after he left the capital, he went back to Rega in Latvia and later to Vladivostok, Siberia where he became a government instructor and still drew tuition from the czar. They went on a vacation to Japan and later to the United States, still drawing pay from the czar, but several of his friends having been imprisoned he decided to stay in the United States. He took a law course at Berkeley, received his LL.D, and practiced fifteen years in Oakland, raising his four children as fine American citizens. The oldest son is a claim agent manager for a steam company, the second son is district manager of the Telephone company, and the third son is a draftsman.

Ashland Art School Closes Successful Term.

The Sixth Annual session of the Ashland Art school closed with an interesting exhibit August 10th.

This school is directed by Miss Belle Cady White of Pratt Institute, New York where as a graduate of a four-year's course and as a teacher she has spent over twenty years in art work.

Miss White taught landscape and till life painting in her school in Ashland and had as her assistants in other branches of art, Miss Marguerite Hansen, graduate Girls' High School, Brooklyn, Pratt Institute, Normal art, and Columbia university, holding both B. S. and M. A. degrees. Miss Hansen taught history of color and appreciation of painting, also costume illustration and appropriate dress design.

Stanley G. Breneiser, student and graduate of many schools, both in America and on the continent, and several great masters. Now head of art department Santa Maria Hige and junior college and member of lecture faculty, American Institute Educational travel.

Mr. Breneiser taught pictorial and decorative illustration and commercial art.

Breneiser had an easy and delightful way with the students and the happy faculty of bringing out their best efforts, he could develop imagination where almost none had hitherto seemed to exist.

W. Ray Fenton, are supervisor Torrington, Connecticut, also a graduate of several important schools including Pratt Institute and Columbia University, and having had extensive experience in teaching arts and crafts in Western Canadian schools, conducted classes in Ashland in "Teachers Problems" and Arts and Crafts.

Problems in pure design were taken up in the first course and problems in tooled and dyed leather gesso decoration, linoleum block printing and batik were studied.

It was indeed a privilege to attend any of the eight courses given by the four instructors and those who could work in four classes called themselves lucky.

It is not yet known whether there will be a seventh term of this school held at Ashland. Ashland, as a city does not seem to appreciate the inestimable value of what Miss White is doing within her boundaries and Medford in this sixth year of the art schools existence only sent eight pupils. These were Miss Esther Miller, Mrs. Bertha Barnum, Miss Margaret Ossenbrugge, Walter Young, Mrs. Don Newbury, Miss Bert Porter, Mrs. Dalton Cox and Mrs. Howard Barto.

Altogether only thirty-one pupils attended the school this season—one Miss Braun came from St. Louis; Miss Rhoda Slusher from Astoria, Ore.; Miss Nellie Kohler, Yreka, Cal.; Miss Osborne, Portland; Miss Kiser from northern Oregon; Miss Maxfield from Nampa, Idaho; Gertrude Stites, Sacramento; Robert Carter from Talent found favor with Mr. Breneiser who took him south with the Breneir family to live in their home and attend the art school in Santa Maria.

It would seem that it was a lucky star that guided Robert Carter when he won the scholarship offered thru the efforts of the county superintendent of schools, Mrs. Susanne Holmes Carter. Great things are predicted for Robert, who seems to have talent plus personality.

These summer sessions under talented instructors, might enable many young people to find themselves and determine their path way in life.

Cool Comfort in Midsummer

The first hot waves of summer are felt more keenly than the later ones; most people can withstand severe cold better than severe heat.

The housewife should plan during the sultry days to have as little unnecessary work as possible. She can weed out all the pictures, bric-a-brac, etc., and put in their places pots of hardy ferns. Draw the shades and close the sashes early in the morning and the house will have the appearance of a green, shady dell. Indeed, there will be 10 or more degrees difference in the outside temperature and that in the house. Then in the evening open all the windows and doors and leave open all night. Of course they must be screened.

You should have a shaded back yard. A big tree is ideal, but if you are not so fortunate, make a planting for it this fall, using some of the quick-growing shrubs. A lot of the routine work can be carried on here, accompanied by a bird chorus which will turn toil into poetry of labor.

All cooking should be done in the early morning. There are so many ways of dressing appetizing meals without standing over a hot fire. Rich, heavy foods should be eliminated and in their place serve fresh vegetables, fruits, eggs, salads and custards.

All vegetables, especially lettuce, may be kept crisp without ice if gathered in the early morning, washed in very cold water, drained and put into as near air-tight container as you have. (I use my big aluminum roaster) then put in a cool place.

Plan for a variety by serving things in a different way. For instance, if you are serving a pot roast or chicken for the noon meal, save the part of the broth, add a little gelatine and in the evening cut in cubes and use with the sliced cold meat on platter of crisp lettuce leaves and mayonnaise. Save out a portion of the vegetable you are serving before you season it and make into salad for the next meal.

Cake kept in a well-ventilated box will keep free from mold.

Humane Society

HUMANE SOCIETY TO HAVE BOOTH AT FAIR

The Jackson County Humane society will have a booth in the educational building at the Jackson county fair, Sept. 11, 12, 13, 14.

Children are invited to send pictures, any size, unframed, taken with their pets. A prize will be offered for the best picture. These pictures will be hung in the booth for exhibition together with Humane posters.

Pictures should be sent to the Jackson County Humane Society, and should be of children taken with their pets—and not pictures of pets alone as previously stated.

Pets Aid Felon's Morale.

They may be "cons" and "bad men" the prisoners at the convict road camps but their pets do not seem to care.

At the six northern California road camps the convict laborers have many pets according to Jas. B. Holohan.

There are Teddy and Jennie, orphan brown bears. Pete, Alphonse and Charlie are gray squirrels so tame that they eat from the men's plates. Algernon, Dorothy, Wilhelmina and Ignatz are tame mice.

Benjamin Watson, one of the convicts, has adopted Alphonse.

Two quarrelsome chipmunks have been named Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey and put on a nightly bout for the men, fighting over bits of bread.

A fawn whose mother was killed has been reared. Lily—Elizabeth—a vote showed a tie on the names—follows the men all over the camp, and sleeps beneath the cot of one of the convicts.

A bevy of tufted blue jays have been called "the jute mill orchestra" by the prisoners, who say that the noisy birds make a clacking like the mill here at San Quentin.

A wild cat "kitten"—pet of an Indian work prisoner, and called Kickapoo — is the latest acquisition of the convict "zoo." The men say that "Kickie" will grow up to be as tame as a house cat. It sleeps in one of the bunk houses with the convicts.

The prisoners have an open space in each camp where bread crumbs are sprinkled, and northern birds— junkos and tohees — feed there. An old water pail serves as a bird bath.

Warden Holohan says that hard work, healthful conditions and the prospects of shortened terms—plus the men's interest in their pets—is responsible for the excellent morale in the camps.

—Our Dumb Animals.

The Jackson County Humane Society will exhibit in the Humane booth at the Fair, pictures, any size unframed, of children and their pets. There will be a prize given for the best picture.

Please send pictures to the JACKSON COUNTY HUMANE SOCIETY.

Oriental Poppies Should Be Planted

By Mary Ann

In the Rogue River valley the Oriental poppies bloom for a longer season than I have known them to in any other place. For this reason they should be planted more freely, and during the next few weeks is the time to do it. If you will examine your plants you will find that they are practically dormant. The foliage has died down to the ground, and the plant looks dead. They are not dead, however, simply resting, and with the first rains of the fall there will be plenty of growth.

Just now, while the plants are dormant, is the time to plant them, or to divide the old clumps and make new ones. You should add some new varieties to your garden. Some of the new named varieties are exceptionally fine. They may be had from some of the eastern growers in pots, or simply as they are dug up in the field. It does not pay to raise them from seed, as so large a percentage will come in that miserable brick-red so objectionable in the garden.

They may be propagated by taking two-inch lengths of the small roots and starting them on moist sand with a small amount of leaf mold in it. The pieces of root send up shoots very readily, and each plant will be just the same as the parent plant. Bury the pieces horizontally and cover with an inch of soil. It is not a bad plan to purchase several new varieties at this time and cut off some of their roots and make more. The removal of these few pieces of root will not harm the plants. Thus you will get several new ones for the price of one plant.

Bridge Party Novelties

A set of Florentine ash trays is a treasure for the woman who gives bridge parties. They are just heavy enough so that they are not easily brushed aside by a careless gesture and they add to the decoration when the bridge sets are of Italian linen. The hostess who likes complete consistency might even have for her prizes a bambino or a Savonarola plaque for each table.

FALL FASHIONS SEE NEW USES FOR FUR

PARIS—(AP) White crushed velvet and forsleeves on a black cloth dress, and bands of white ermine on black suede gloves for wear with a black afternoon coat collared in white ermine, are some of the new uses of fur in autumn fashions.

Many detachable fur collars of scarf form are added to winter coats both sport and afternoon type. A new fox collar is a straight upstanding band which fastens with cloth tabs of the material of the suit it accompanies.

INDIAN WOMAN SAYS HER CATTLE STOLEN

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 17—(AP)—Fannie Pitt, Klamath Indian woman, today filed two suits in federal district court against Dice Crain, resident of the Klamath reservation, in which she charged conversion of cattle and assault and battery.

The plaintiff alleges that Crain and others removed the cattle, valued at $750 from her property by force and that when she resisted conversion, the defendant attempted to shoot her.

Recognized As Gentlewomen, Not Ladies, in Congress

The eight women who are members of the house of representatives are not "ladies." They are "gentlewomen." On that point Speaker Longworth continues to rule firmly and undeviatingly. A male member of the house is a "gentleman." When John Garner, leader of the democratic minority, rises in the house to address the speaker, he is recognized by the speaker as "the gentleman from Texas."

By analogy, therefore, and by etymological parallelism and by euphony, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick is "the gentlewoman from Illinois." It has indeed a pleasant sound, as of old family heirloom silver spoons, and a faintly pleasant odor, as of lavender leaves in the old historic linen chest in the ancestral attic. Yet, or rather, therefore, it is not entirely relished by the house's eight women members.

One of them, to free herself from what she regards as the sickly aroma of decayed gentility implied and conveyed by the word "gentlewoman," is now contemplating an effort toward a great total verbal reform. She thinks of trying to persuade Speaker Longworth to greet and "recognize" Mr. Garner not as "the gentleman from Texas" but simply, and without any ulterior assumptions, as "the member from Texas."

Thereupon, the speaker would recognize Mrs. McCormick as "the member from Illinois."

Thus the whole problem would be settled on a basis of democratic simplicity and of sex equality triumphantly combined. The question remains whether the masculine romantic temperament of Speaker Longworth can be brought to accept this feminine realism.

Unseen Wires Can Make the Living Room More Livable

Is your living room a jungle of electric wires? It needn't be, and you needn't deprive yourself of the complete luxury of electricity, if you "see" the kind of room you want and plan the wiring.

"Luxurious equipment for a large living room, 18 by 24, might call for as many as six wall brackets, a ceiling cluster light, seven convenience outlets at the baseboard (at least three of them double) and four tumbler switches. If this seems extreme, reflect that in such a room five or six lamps, small and large, for floor and tables, is none too many; there is the radio to be connected, and the fan in summer. Perhaps the double outlet at the fireplace means a lamp for the sleepy hollow chair which must stand there; and an outlet for the chafing dish, percolator, or waffle iron for afternoon tea by the fireside or a tete a tete midnight supper.

Also in rearranging furniture it is a relief not to have your plans defeated by lack of lighting attachments in desired spots, and to be freed from the necessity of trailing long cords around behind the furniture.

The vacuum cleaner may not work effectively for the entire room from one outlet, especially in a large room. It should be attached at different places in the room for easy and efficient use.
