Seattle Librarian and Japanese Guide Succumb On Mount Shuksan, Wash.—Blizzard Surprises Party Late Sunday—Other Members Badly Frozen, Rescued.

PELLINGHAM, Wash., Aug. 20.—(AP)—A summer outing ended in death by freezing for Miss Thelma Martin, Seattle librarian, and K. Furuya, Japanese artist, Portland, Ore., when a blizzard surprised a party of mountain climbers on Mount Shuksan, Washington, near Mount Baker, late Sunday. Miss Rita McDowell and Herman Wandering, both of Seattle, other members of the climbing party, although badly frozen and suffering from all night exposure, were last night recovering in a trail cabin and will be brought down the mountainside to Mount Lodge early today. The two women and Wandering left Chain Lake camp early Sunday for the climb and encountered Furuya, an expert mountaineer, who offered to lead the others on their ascent. Shortly after the blizzard struck, Furuya showed signs of weakening and in a few hours had given up completely. While his companions tried to revive him, Miss Martin collapsed, and both froze to death while attempts were being made to keep them alive.

Grief-stricken and harassed by chilling winds and blinding snow, the two remaining climbers attempted to make their way back to civilization. Their all night efforts failed and searchers found them dangerously near a cliff just before dawn yesterday morning. Miss McDowell and Wandering were taken to the trail cabin and

PROSPERITY SEEN IN NORTHWESTERN PUBLIC CONTRACTS

Reflecting continued prosperity in the northwest for the nation's second largest industry, public works contracts this month will show a gain of more than 50 per cent over the best previous month of the year, predicts Pacific Builder and Engineer, construction news publication of Seattle. From August 1 to August 15, inclusive, 147 contracts totaling $3,065,784 were reported. The total for the month is estimated at $11,000,000 or more. These figures, it is pointed out, are exclusive of building construction which in the larger cities alone will total in the neighborhood of $7,000,000.

How the volume of public works, or engineering, construction has been increasing during the recent months in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana is indicated in the following totals: May, $5,495,328; June, $7,201,090; July, $7,463,633; August, $11,000,000 (estimate). Comparing the $3,065,784 total favorably with the totals for the first half of the year, the Pacific Builder lists 40 more contracts to be awarded before August 31, and adds:

"Bids for Portland's $4,250,000 St. John's bridge will be received and later in the month Everett will open bids on its $2,000,000 pipeline and reservoir project. A dozen important highway and bridge contracts will be let by the Oregon state highway commission and also by the bureau of public roads. These jobs, together with smaller work coming up, will bring the total from August 1 to August 31, inclusive, to $11,000,000 and probably higher."
