PASSENGERS ARE THRILLED when they glance down from the trains that cross the upper falls in Letchworth State Park, New York. The huge railroad bridge stands towering over the beautiful cascade.

MAKING WHOOPEE on the back of an elephant 112 years old and weighing four tons! That's Dorothy Davis, Broadway show girl, shown here at Coney Island on a pleasure jaunt. She thrilled with a toe dance on Tillie's back.

YOU CAN'T SINK WHEN YOU GO SWIMMING HERE. At least, no one has yet because of the density of the water. This shows one of the popular bathing spots on Salt Lake at Salt Lake City, with its immense casino for pleasure seekers.

LIKE THIS VIEW OF CLARA BOW? Well, we do, too. Looks as if the famous "It" girl is about to do a little paddling of her own canoe even though she has already picked a hubby.

THE NATIONAL CAPITOL AT WASHINGTON is seen at this angle from atop the Library of Congress building. And it's an unusually striking view, with Old Glory waving majestically in the foreground.

IT LOOKS JUST LIKE A BIG BALL, but that "U. S. Navy" explains things. This is the type balloon used to transport hydrogen gas to dirigible hangars for refueling huge air liners like the Graf Zeppelin.

A "TIN AIRSHIP" for the United States Navy was built in sections standing on end in a Detroit factory. One of the sections of the all-metal dirigible is pictured in construction here.

THERE'S NOTHING FADDISH ABOUT THESE OUTFITS. In fact, they are clothes for the occasion. Left to right, the Prince of Wales in his Boy Scout uniform as he participated in the big international jamboree in England; Kimiyee Nakamura, graduate of a Japanese college, as she looks in native costume on a visit to American colleges; Leone Lane, Hollywood actress, in the newest of sports coats, a Navajo blanket creation; and Dean Inge, of gloomy mien, in his customary gaiters and clerical dress which he wore to the wedding of Dr. C. W. Saleeby, dress reform leader.

SOME FOND ADMIRER certainly was generous to Camilla Horn, cinema star. Look at the lilies she has. But Camilla deserves 'em for her excellent work in the movies lately. Don't overlook the wrap!

A TREE STUMP CAN BE A HOME, especially if it is one of those giant California redwoods. This stump was used by a prospector many years ago as a two-story dwelling for himself, on top floor, and burro, on ground floor. And both had plenty room.

HONORING EARL HAIG, famous British army leader, this statue showing Haig in field dress uniform, looking across a battlefield, will be erected in London as a national memorial.

COLLEGIATE! Army flyers are going to use bear-skin flying coats, like the one worn here by Major Livingston G. Living, in cold weather hereafter. They cost $300.
