

DAIRY MINDED FARMERS NEED OF THIS STATE

Oregon Dairy Improvement Council Seeks Ways to Populate Oregon Soil—Keep High Producing Cows in Home State.

SALEM, Ore., Sept. 27.—(AP)—A hunt for ways and means to populate Oregon dairy farms with "dairy-minded" farmers, and to keep the high-grade, high producing Oregon cows at home instead of going to California, and to sell dairy products instead of dairy cows into the California producing market, the Oregon Dairy Improvement executive council held a meeting here Thursday to formulate plans and outline the program for the work of the newly created council.

The council was tentatively gotten under way at a meeting of dairymen at Corvallis last March, its organization definitely perfected at a Salem meeting last May, and the Thursday meeting was for the purpose of getting its shoulders under a program which it may push over.

W. C. Ide, secretary of the state chamber of commerce, who has been in touch with the work done by the California dairy council, outlined the educational campaign, the method of financing, the plans for increasing the use of dairy products, for the improving of the dairy herds which has been undertaken and worked out successfully by the California council, and it is likely some similar plans will be adopted for Oregon.

J. D. Mielke, state dairy and food commissioner, pointed out that Oregon is raising cows for California dairies instead of producing dairy products for the California consumer, that under the system of forced feeding required in California that the usefulness of a high grade cow is only from two to three years in a California

HOTELS CROWDED WITH ATTORNEYS

Because of many lawyers and their families and others from all parts of the state here attending the state bar association convention the hotels of the city were filled to capacity last night and today, beyond a few rooms which had been reserved for regular commercial traveling patrons, and in addition quite a number of the convention visitors and tourists who had to be turned away, were sent over to the Lathia hotel at Ashland.

The Hotel Medford management, which is the headquarters of the convention, anticipating the crush took the precaution yesterday morning of engaging rooms for 50 convention visitors in Ashland.

In addition a number of the visiting lawyers are guests at the home of local relatives or friends during their stay in the city.

Just a number of long distance commercial men who on learning that this convention would be held in Medford today and Saturday, and tourists, who were unable to change their schedules, were quite pleased when they arrived in the city last evening and had to be turned away from local hotels.

tion of the two day State Bar association convention which will end here Saturday night. The meeting was called to order by W. W. "Pike" Davis, president of the State Bar association, after which Colonel E. E. Kelly, president of the Southern Oregon Bar association gave an address of welcome to the delegates.

In the absence of A. W. Pines, Attorney Gus Newberry said a few words of greeting on behalf of the city of Medford. These talks were responded to by President Davis. Following this the latter gave his annual report and the convention received reports from the other officers in the state association.

The principal address was followed by short talks given by the following: Dan C. E. Carpenter, head of the University of Oregon Law school, who reviewed the courses now being given; George Shepherd, past president of the Multnomah County Bar association who denounced the practice of the large trust companies in furnishing service on estates and wills.

With six out of seven of the supreme court judges present, practically all of the circuit judges of Oregon, and a large delegation of prominent attorneys from all sections of the state gathered in Medford last night, the State Bar association convention, which started off bright and early this morning.

BANDITS IN BANK CRIME

Plague with leading the pack in the robbery of $225,000 from a small bank, fatally shooting the president and the president and the president's son. A trusting country doctor was called in to treat one of the bandits wounded during the fray at Lamar. The doctor's illness form was found in an arroyo some days later.

The Fleagle family had a farm, Ralph, brother of Jake, was arrested in the face of certain damaging evidence, he, in the presence of the officers, "came clean." Two other arrests followed. George J. Ablander was caught, he confessed, like Ralph. Then Howard Boynton was arrested near Sacramento, Cal. These three await October 1 as their judgment day.

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE TO START NOV. 12

Date for Start of New System Set By Chairman—Drive to Cover 5 Days—Portland Expert to Assist—Leaders Named.

November 12 to 16th inclusive were decided upon today as the dates for the putting on of Medford's first Community Chest drive. A. H. Sanders of the Portland Community chest, will come to Medford and personally assist the local officials in carrying on the drive. The total amount to cover all of Medford's charitable needs for the year is placed for 1929-1930 at $20,000.

M. N. Hogan has been selected by Hamilton Patton, chairman, to take charge of the drive for the larger contributions, having a corps of solicitors under his direction.

William Bolger, manager of the Dairy store, will have charge of the donations from foreign corporations, such as oil companies, packers, etc. The drive within the city limits will be under the special executive control of Charles Wing and James Collins of the real estate fraternity. It is now planned to have the city divided into four sections, with the three principal service clubs and the American Legion each in charge of one section. This campaign will probably be on a competitive basis, frequent reports showing which organization is leading in total contributions.

The establishment of the Community Chest idea in Medford has aroused keen public interest and has met with practically unanimous public approval. The idea has been generally adopted not only on this coast, but throughout the country, and came to be demanded in Medford when the constant drives and solicitations became little short of a public nuisance.

Under the new system there will be only one drive a year, resulting, it is believed, in a saving of both time and money, without handicapping any worthy organization in any way.

TO INSTALL DIAL PHONES

The plans for the improvements which will greatly add to the efficiency of the telephone system, were made last March by company engineers, who were convinced that Medford's steady growth was continuing.

Development Seen. In their plans, the engineers made the following report on Medford: "Medford, a city with a population of approximately 12,500 (now estimated 14,000) inhabitants, is situated in a fertile valley tributary to the Rogue river, approximately 324 miles south of Portland on the Southern Pacific railroad and Pacific highway. This city is also of importance as an air port, it now being the port of call for both the air mail and passenger service between Portland and San Francisco.

The city of Medford is soon to have a modern municipal airport, the land, a parcel of 150 acres, having been purchased to develop Medford as a city of more importance from an aerial point of view. "Medford" is the center for a large horticultural and farming district. The main commercial fruit product is pears, for which this locality is famous. There are several large fruit packing establishments located here and three more are in the course of construction and expect to be operating by July 1 of this year. Manufacturing industries consist of two large lumber concerns and a box factory that draw their personnel from the population of Medford. Residential development is showing an upward trend, there being a considerable amount of home building going forward. Especially is this true of the district east of Bear Creek where the residential belt is being created by the best class.

HAD SUFFERED 10 YEARS; THEN SHE STARTED SARGON

"After ten years of suffering, Sargon made me well and strong again." Indigestion and constipation had me in a terribly rundown condition. I had very little appetite and the little I ate did me good with me. I had an almost constant pain in my right side and I never got a good night's sleep. Finally, I had an operation on my gall bladder but my condition grew steadily worse. My nerves went all to pieces and I never got any more and I sleep fine. Sargon Pills did me of constipation, stimulated my liver and that pain in my side is gone. Now I'm full of new strength and energy and feel good all the time. SOUTHERN OREGON ROAD WIDENING CONTRACT GOES TO L. O. HERROLD

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 27.—(AP)—A protest against the sale of two miles of highway along the Klamath Falls-Lakeview highway was on file with the forest service today after the state highway commission had lodged a sharp rebuke against the agency for stripping roads of trees.

Commission members also said the forest service would be asked to exchange timber on the Klamath Falls-Lakeview highway, owned by James H. Owen, for other timber. Owen said he was willing to make the exchange if the forest service will give him timber elsewhere.

GIANT LIVESTOCK CO-OP PLAN FOR SURPLUS CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Organization of a gigantic national co-operative marketing corporation for livestock with a view of controlling surpluses is contemplated by the federal farm board, C. H. Demman, one of its members, testified today before the senate agriculture committee. Demman represents livestock on the board. He said it was the intention of the board to help the organization and financing of such an organization as it also would be of assistance in disposing of surpluses if they should occur.
