

MRS. LEONARD IS CHOSEN TO HEAD COUNTY W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. county convention for Jackson county was held at Ashland, Wednesday, Oct. 2. Mrs. Lulu Howard of Ashland, vice president of the county, in the chair. The county president, Mrs. Bryant, being unable to be present, Mesdames Woods, Roseborough, Jones, Cudary, Little and Benachator were present from Medford. At the business session the following were elected to the county office: President, Mrs. S. L. Leonard, Medford; vice president, Mrs. H. P. Holmes, Ashland; corr. secy, Mrs. G. H. Prescott, Medford; rec. secy, Mrs. E. C. Roseborough, Medford; treas., Mrs. C. W. Frealey, Ashland.

Mrs. J. C. Woods of Medford was chosen delegate to the state convention at Pendleton, October 21-24. Mrs. Ed Patterson of Ashland was chosen alternate. The convention went on record as commending and appreciative of the effective work of the prohibition officer Terry Talent in enforcing the prohibition law. The secretary was instructed to write Officer Talent to that effect.

The convention closed with a pleasing program presented by the Ashland union.

The Medford union met in regular session Thursday, Oct. 10 at 2:30 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A. You are invited.

Scheduled local W. C. T. U. meetings average at least 400 daily every day in the year. This does not include officers' meetings, county conventions of any special meetings of any kind.

The W. C. T. U. women visit at least 1,000,000 patients in hospitals and institutions each year. They give annually at least 2,000,000 garments to people in distress; they will take 1,000,000 invalids for auto rides this year. They will make at least 5000 visits to prisons with comforts and encouragement for the unfortunate.

In addition many state and county W. C. T. U. organizations maintain special charities, such as homes for friendless and aged. The W. C. T. U. of Oregon maintains a farm home for dependent children at Corvallis to which all unions in the state contribute.

Child welfare work is carried on by the W. C. T. U. under 1923 directors and 2500 study classes. The W. C. T. U. operates 27 social centers in cities with large foreign population and this department has 475 teachers and 900 social workers.

Citizenship work occupies several thousand W. C. T. U. women in 48 states who hold 5000 meetings a year. They hold nearly 50,000 evangelistic meetings a year and distribute at least 25,000 Bibles. The W. C. T. U. operates 500 exhibits at county and state fairs and establishes day nurseries during these gatherings. A well organized department introduces health topics and talks at 100,000 meetings every year.

In 28 years more than 2,000,000 school children have taken part in the medal contests. This year, 70,000 children are preparing for these contests; and nearly 1,000,000 high school and college students have this year entered essay contests on some phase of scientific temperance.

During the past month there have been over 250 cars of freight shipped from the Gold Hill yards to the markets of the world. Of the total there were 98 cars of fruit from the local packing establishments. One hundred and twenty-four cars of cement rolled from the yards of the Beaver Portland Cement company and 21 cars of lime products, chiefly lime rock, was shipped by the Lively Lime Products company. Heavy shipments of incoming freight is reported by Arthur Mullins, freight clerk. He stated that the Southern Pacific is handling more incoming freight at the present time than for a long time. This indicated a prosperous condition in the vicinity.—Gold Hill News.

HUMAN INTEREST, CLEAN HUMOR IN 'IDLE RICH' FILM

"The Idle Rich." The all-talking comedy that opened its three days' engagement at the Radio theater yesterday, is so honey-like, depicting the every day life in a stuffy flat of a middle-class family, and so full of clean humor, that it is one of those shows that everyone likes. This is why the audience yesterday laughed and chuckled from beginning to end. The comedy is well played, having three well-known stars in its cast — pretty Bessie Love, Lella Hyams and Conrad Nagle as youth, and the very good, and a real human interest story is depicted. It is so clean that not even one of its male character wears low shoes. Not a suggestive line or scene. No back stage or night club scenes, no dancing or theme song, nor even a hint of tragedy or mystery except that the leads begin some business. Yet this tale of the every day life and problems of just average home folks keeps even the blasé theater goer chuckling and absorbed.

The story all takes place in a flat of a family, a daughter of whom—Lella Hyams—marries her millionaire employer, a likeable young man with a sense of humor (Conrad Nagle), who, after their honeymoon, come to live with the proud but apprehensive family in the flat. Repeated humorous situations arise from the family's false ideas of what the new millionaire member likes and dislikes, and his finally inducing the purblind old folks to move into a more comfortable and spacious home.

While Conrad Nagle and Lella Hyams are both splendid in their characterizations, it is Bessie Love, as the "old" sister, with her vivacious and natural slangy expressions, who is the real hit of "The Idle Rich." Robert Ober as the socialistic cousin, James Neill as the father and Edythe Chapman as the mother, are most satisfying in their respectable roles.

There is also a news review and short talking comedy.

COURT OFFICIALS HOSTS AT FEAST

The officials of the United States federal court, in session here this week, are giving a fish dinner to some of their friends at the Hotel Medford this evening.

Hal Kenyon, deputy clerk of the court and Loren Cleburn, deputy marshal, both expert fishermen, are furnishing the steelheads, of their own catch.

The federal officers, who were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Warner and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Taylor at Crescent City, had a highly enjoyable trip, returning to Medford last evening.

United States District Attorney Geo. Neuner arrived last evening and is attending court.

PHOENIX CHURCH CLASS OPENED SUNDAY NIGHT

PHOENIX, Oct. 7.—(Sp.) The first meeting of the school of missions was held at the church Sunday night for the young people's and junior classes.

There were 21 in the young people's class and seven in the junior class. The young people's class is under the leadership of Mrs. Malmon and the junior class under direction of Mrs. Thompson. These classes take the place of the regular Christian Endeavor hours. A class for the adults will be started next Wednesday night, which will take the place of the regular mid-week service.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH AN EDUCATION INFLUENCE

Continued. "sin and food go hand in hand," a Salvation Army officer from Chicago has decided. He is quoted in Time Magazine as saying that three out of every five men and women the army helps have suffered from malnutrition when young—either been underfed or been permitted to overeat. And from this he has deduced that right food makes good morals.

Accordingly children have a better chance, for now as part of the school routine they are taught what to eat and how and when; how to stand and how to sit; how to care for the teeth. "It is as much lustiness as the teaching of the three R's. The efforts of health educators ought to begin to tell in the next generation of criminals."

JACKSONVILLE

JACKSONVILLE, Oct. 7.—(Sp.) Mrs. J. C. Hawk of Portland is visiting her sister, Mrs. Elmer Adams of Jacksonville and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guehen at Medford this week. Her husband accompanied her here and is spending a few days on a hunting trip.

CONTRIBUTOR: Barbara Landon, a social belle, was engaged to a millionaire, when he suddenly disappeared three years ago. After learning that his own fortune had been lost, she met unexpectedly an abandoned and penniless, still desperately in love with her, man who will not allow her wealth to prevent their marriage, as Ray insists it does. She dismissively dismisses herself the object of scorn by an outrageous flirtation with a rich playboy, a fortune-hunting playboy. Her best friend, who is to marry her, is dismissed as a fortune hunter. Barbara's friends see it is a trap and is about to trap a daring heroine in the smoking room, when Ray dashes in and carries her to her station. Convinced that she is being humiliated, she agrees to marry her despite the difference in their fortunes.

Chapter 7 MARRIAGE

They were married in Paris three days later at the American consulate with two strangers for witnesses—for Barbara had told no one of her projected marriage, not even Mrs. Trenton-Jones. Now, as she and Ray stood together on the crowded boulevard after the ceremony on that hot June day, it seemed to Barbara as though Paris were the ideal city for a wedding.

Paris, Barbara thought, was bringing their tea, they danced. It was the first time he had danced with Barbara in three years.

Married—and like two gay children spending a honeymoon in Paris.

all her jewels sparkling in the crystal sunlight. And the Parisians were none the less gay as they sauntered from shop to cafe, where, around little tables in the open, they sat and gossiped the hours away.

"Whenever does Paris work, I wonder," mused Barbara. Then tightening her hold on Ray's arm, she murmured, "But it's wonderful, isn't it?"

And looking down at her he repeated, "Wonderful," although he was not referring to the city.

In her red-brick suit with the little cloche hat that almost, but not quite, hid her shining metallic hair, she seemed to him so adorable that he completely forgot the reason he had married her. He remembered only that he loved her, that he loved her for years, and that now she was entirely, completely his own.

Since the night of the fancy dress dance there had been considerable gossip as to what had come over Barbara Landon. She was rarely seen on deck, even her meals she had served in her stateroom.

Most disturbed by the change in her conduct was Ralph Henderson. He could not understand it, unless, as it was rumored, she was ill. This seemed to him the only feasible explanation.

He had consoled himself with this thought until that very morning at Cherbourg when he knocked at Barbara's stateroom door and had been informed by her steward that Miss Landon had left the ship two hours previously.

"Thunderstruck and not knowing what to make of it, he rushed in search of Mrs. Trenton-Jones in the hope that she could throw some light upon the matter. But she, it appeared, was equally in the dark.

The Englishman groaned. Already he was seeing the checks he had signed in his imagination dissolving into thin air. Under his breath he cursed Mrs. Trenton-Jones for not being a more efficient chaperone.

He suggested that they go together to Paris in the hope of being able to locate Barbara.

From the steward they learned Barbara would be back the following morning before the boat went to Southampton. That, at least, was some small comfort as it was rattled around in a little green taxi from one hotel to another.

At one of the smaller hotels the Englishman passed over the name of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lowther without giving it a second thought. It had never occurred to him to inquire the name of the impudent snob.

About the same time, Barbara and Ray were driving happily through the Champs Elysees, watching with delight the French kiddies at play and riding the bizarre painted horses of the merry-go-round as it swung merrily round to the tune of "Ta Bouche" churned out by an electric piano.

Barbara recognized that time instantly under the name of "One Kiss," a tune that brought back painfully the memory of the days shortly after Ray's disappearance; the days when she had attempted futilely to cover her hurt, how rotten and empty those years had been, like a nightmare she thought. Ray was laughing down at her. "Day dreaming, Barbara? The ride's over. Want to take a 'her?"

But she shook her head and they went back to their taxi. Soon they entered the Bois de Boulogne, too happy for conversation as they drove along the winding roadway to the Pres Catalans where tea, dancing and champagne are all in order any afternoon.

They selected a table on the veranda and, while the waiter was bringing their tea, they danced. It was the first time he had danced with Barbara in three years.

EVANGELISTIC TROUPE AT LOCAL APOSTOLIC MISSION ON TUESDAY

The evangelistic troupe from the Apostolic Faith headquarters at Portland, Ore., returning to Portland from San Francisco, where an evangelistic campaign was held, will be in Medford, at the Apostolic Faith Mission, 42 North Front street, for a meeting Tuesday night, October 8th.

The party consists of 10 evangelists, musicians and singers. A concert by the concert trio, consisting of George Hughes, first violin; W. A. Blatt, cello, and Mrs. Mildred Robinson, piano, will open the meeting.

The party is coming through Medford in one of the most modern and well equipped motor busses to be seen on the highway. This bus is of the sedan type, equipped with living quarters for sleeping and eating. It also is equipped with a modern Western Electric public address machine, used to broadcast the singing and special announcements where large crowds gather.

The Apostolic Faith uses every practical modern invention for the spreading of the gospel.

The Morning Star Quartet, composed of Walter M. Reid, first tenor; W. A. Blatt, second tenor; H. L. Crawford, first bass and George Hughes, second bass, will render special song numbers, including Negro spirituals and well selected gospel songs.

Rev. R. Crawford, the "Flying Evangelist," will be in charge of the service.

The party will be in Medford for one night only. The service will begin promptly at 7:30.

BELLVIEW OFFICERS OF COMMUNITY CLUB GUESTS MRS. TALBOT

BELLVIEW, Ore., Oct. 7.—(Special).—Mrs. Roy Talbot was hostess to the social committee and the officers of the Upper Valley Community club on Friday afternoon.

The afternoon was spent planning some social events for the fall season. Those present were Mrs. Wade Wallis, Mrs. Dustin Meservey, Mrs. Edwin Dunn, Mrs. Thomas Merryman, Mrs. Archie Klineff, Mrs. Mark True and the hostess.

Mrs. Homer Moore left Friday with her sister, Mrs. T. B. Kelley of Great Bend, Kans., for a trip through the south and back to Great Bend, where she will visit her parents.

Mrs. Henry Harris, Mrs. Olney Smith, both of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. Maud Forhan of Saguinaw, Mich., arrived at the Meadorv home Sunday, and will visit relatives. Miss Forhan is a sister of Mrs. Meservey and expects to spend the winter here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Renton spent Friday in Shasta City on business. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hones, who spent the past week at Salem and Portland, returned home Friday by way of the coast route.

SAMS VALLEY HUNTER GETS SEVEN POINTER

SAMS VALLEY, Ore., Oct. 7.—(Special).—Among the successful deer hunters in our district were George Beckus, O. Davis, Vernon Lamb and John Jones. Jones carries the laurels, having killed a seven-pointer which weighed 165 pounds.

But, at that, noticing the old stubborn look creep over his face, she hastened to change the subject. "I'll go hard with me, Barbara, watching you dancing with those other fellows while I'm tooting my blasted old sax."

"She looked at him in amazement. "What are you talking about? Of course you won't be playing the saxophone. You'll be dancing with me."

"He put down his teacup abruptly. "Just how do you figure that? What do you think the ship takes me along for? To give me the rest cure?"

"No, but now that we're married you'll become a 'passenger and share my stateroom, of course."

"She flushed slightly, not looking down at her plate, she commenced cutting a piece of cake into minute fragments.

Ray was silent, staring straight ahead of him. "That's mighty sweet of you, Barbara," he said presently, "but it costs money to transfer to the passenger list."

"But surely, Ray," she said softly, reaching for his hand beneath the table, "you know that what money I have is now equally yours."

He shook his head and pressed his lips tightly together. "Sweet of you again, Barbara, but I told you I couldn't live off your money. Don't you see that yourself?"

"She didn't, but she was wise enough to pretend to. "Of course, once home we'll find you a decent job—"

He broke in harshly. "A decent job? What's wrong with it?"

"Well, dear, people might look upon it as rather a joke. Of course," she added hastily, "it'll be delightful for you to keep up as a passenger."

"That's where you don't understand, Barbara," he told her bluntly. "I love my work. To me jazz is an art, the same as if I were a painter or a writer. It's miserable if I had to give it up."

ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP DRIVE OF RED CROSS TO BE OPENED SOON

Contributed

Once again we find the time approaching for the annual roll call of the American Red Cross. There is no American community so small but that here and there throughout the year may be seen the Red Cross emblem pasted on window panes of homes.

Some are humble homes and some isolated farm homes, but all proclaim to the passerby the interest of the people within, in the duties and responsibilities of our national life.

Chiefly these Red Cross emblems send forth from these window panes their message. "We are members of the great American Red Cross and we have a share in its work for humanity."

The American Red Cross cannot exist without members. Multiplied by millions they compose the Red Cross. Of every dollar membership, one-half is given to local work and one-half to the maintenance of the national organization in its disaster and relief work.

Let us see the Red Cross emblem in every home in Jackson county at the completion of the 13th annual roll call.
