

Daring Stunts in 'Flying Marine,' Rialto Saturday

Daring tailspins, loops, barrel rolls, spectacular air turns are featured in the ear rousing of the screen. "The Flying Marine" is synchronized with dialogue and a beautiful musical score which comes to the Rialto theater tomorrow for one day only. Ben Lyon, Shirley Mason and Jason Roberts are the featured players. The thrills of aviation form the background for a love story of great human interest. Two brothers fall in love with the same girl. The girl promises herself to the younger brother only to find that it is the older one she loves. Just as she is about to break her engagement, her fiancé suffers a severe injury in an airplane crash. Her life depends on his feeling in her. She makes her true faith to save the boy. When all seems hopeless as far as the happiness of these three young people is concerned, Fate enters in the form of grim tragedy and effects a solution of their problem. Ben Lyon gives a splendid performance as the dashing young aviator. Shirley Mason, the petite and pretty heroine, and Jason Roberts in the role of the older brother, render natural performances.

SUNDOWN STORIES

By Mary Graham Bonner. The Little Black Clock was very happy, and he was full of plans and ideas. "I've turned the time back this time," the Little Black Clock said. "And we're going to see something which started all sorts of big things. Watch!"

John and Peggy and the Little Black Clock found themselves in a room in which a man was watching a kettle boiling on the stove. "Is he going to have some tea?" Peggy asked. "If he is I don't see why he doesn't take the kettle off now. The water certainly is boiling enough."

"Why does he watch it like that?" John asked. "Well, anyway, it doesn't prove what my mother says."

"What's that?" asked the Little Black Clock. "My mother says that a watched kettle never boils. That kettle is being watched, and it certainly is boiling," John answered.

"He's not interested in tea or anything just now except that boiling kettle—or rather, the boiling water, and the way it is behaving in that kettle."

"What a funny thing to watch," John said. "The boiling water began to lift the lid of the kettle. Up and down went the lid, and the man seemed so very, very happy. I can do it. I know I can."

"The man was saying to himself. He had not noticed John. Nor had he noticed the Little Black Clock. "Well, wait and see some of his experiments. I can fix the time all right even if it takes some time while," said the Little Black Clock.

"So they watched and saw the man use a piston which moved as the kettle lid had moved by means of steam, and they saw a wheel turning around at the same time. "What in the world are we seeing?" John asked.

"The invention of the first steam engine!" exclaimed the Little Black Clock. "And the man you have been watching is James Watt."

(Tomorrow—"What Happened Then.")
