Waterway Interest Calls Hoover West For Celebration of Ohio Canalization

CINCINNATI (AP)—The completion of an inland waterway system, a development to which he is heartily committed, calls President Hoover to his first journey beyond the Atlantic seaboard since his inauguration.

Here, tomorrow he will dedicate a marble shaft commemorating the completion of the Ohio river canalization. The canal system, nearly 1,000 miles long, extends from Pittsburgh to Cairo, Ill.

The president will speak here from hallowed ground, tortured by the conquering feet of three nations. Before the Indians discovered the Ohio in 1670 and claimed the territory for Louis XIV of France. Great Britain seized the territory during the French and Indian wars of 1755 to 1762. American colonists pushing westward challenged the British, and the treaty of Paris after the revolution gave the land to the United States.

Mr. Hoover might recall that the first president, George Washington, descended the Ohio in 1773; that in the fruitful days before the civil war the old river teemed with commerce; that the bugles of war in '61 marked it as the line between north and south. The canalization-monument stands in Eden park.

Originally the dedication ceremony was planned for October 15 but the president requested the date be set at October 22 to permit him to receive and entertain

During his trip down the river, President Hoover's boat probably the government steamer Mississippi, will lie up over night along the Indiana shore.

Klamath Pelicans Maligned Bird, Says A. C. Allen; Do Not Destroy Trout But Act As Lake Scavengers

Pelicans of Upper Klamath lake have recently been maligned in the newspapers by a man who did not give his name, his statement being ascribed to a Klamath Falls visitor at the Heathman hotel. He recommended an open season on pelicans, stating that "one pelican will destroy more fish than 50 fishermen."

Our authority for the assumption that pelicans have had nothing to do with the mysterious die-off of trout in the Klamath lake region. This article will soon come out in Field and Stream.

"My personal observations, I will state positively that no white pelican (and they are the only pelicans on Klamath lake) can catch a healthy trout at any time. I don't believe a pelican could catch a trout if he were in the tank and the trout were put in a bird net certainly in diameter and two feet deep. Certainly the pelican cannot catch one in open water. Any man who claims it has never watched a pelican fish."

"The pelican is extremely slow. If he sees a fish jump he lumbers over to the spot, sails down, extends his feet before him to act as a brake and smashes into the water."

"He then foolishly looks around for the fish. What kind of a fish would be there?"

"The pelican never dives. He can only 'tip up,' open his beak and hope to bird heaven that some thing gets in it. More often than not he gets nothing. Sometimes he gets a piece of tule, which he swallows. The only fish he can catch is a dead or sick one."

"This will be evident to anyone who watches the pelicans. Besides, Professor Snyder of Stanford university, one of the leading ichthyologists of the United States, came up here a number of years ago. He was sent in by the government to settle this very point about the pelicans. He spent weeks in studying them, he killed a number of the birds and examined their insides, and he did not leave until he had satisfied himself on the point. He told me that the pelicans never caught a trout except one that was ready to die. Therefore, from that statement and my own observations, the pelican is useful as a scavenger to eat up the thousands of sick and dying suckers and chubs.

"I have watched, from a very close point of observation, the famous 'drives' of pelicans. I photographed them for Fox motion picture news. The unknown man who was quoted in a newspaper article jumped at conclusions and did not see the drive as it happens. The pelicans do not 'form a semi-circle' or 'sitting out in a fan shape.' They gather in a bunch. The front of the bunch maintains a line of remarkable straightness, almost like a company of soldiers. Those in rear close up to that line. They swim forward slowly, tipping up and gulping when they raise their beaks. They do not drive toward the shore except by accident. They usually are out on the shallow 'banks' and travel in any direction. The fish they are after are small chub, suckers and a few bull heads (not catfish). They get a few, not many and do not store all they can in a pouch they have. I have never yet seen fish stored in the pouch below the beak. Even if they did the only fish they catch are chub and suckers and if the anonymous 'Klamath Falls visitor' knew as much as he pretended then he would admit that today Klamath lake is alive with chub and suckers and the great, wonderful trout is almost a thing of the past. No harm can be done by allowing the pelicans to catch ten times the chub they do catch."

"And the cause of the passing of the trout is not the pelican, or any other bird. It is caused directly by the wanton destruction of the fish by 'fish hogs' allied by the deadly motorboat. I have seen, time after time, certain 'fishermen' slaughter the fish by the hundreds of pounds. It is a well-known fact that it used to be no job at all for one motorboat to take a couple of hundred pounds of trout a day. I have seen the tubes filled with trout which had been thrown away. I have seen strings of them left to rot in boats and about the shores. I have seen men trying to give away their biggest catch of 100 pounds or more. The game wardens were powerless because of the motorboats. The fishing from motorboats while in motion should be prohibited and the bag limit should be cut down."

"But the pelicans do not catch trout or game fish. They can't do it! It is impossible! They are scavengers. And as for their beauty—just ask the tourists who watch the great, snowy birds sailing over the water. No! Your 'Klamath Falls visitor' was talking through his bonnet."—The Oregonian.

CENTRAL POINT GRANGE SUPPER HUGE SUCCESS FOR AID OF TREASURY

CENTRAL POINT, Ore., Oct. 21.—(Special)—The grange supper on Friday evening was a grand success, with about 135 in attendance, netting the economic committee $57.

The menu was excellent and showed the ability of the grange ladies for, you know, the way to win the heart of a man is through his stomach.

Road Supervisors Tetherow and Perry, the county court and the whole county budget committee were on hand to receive that which sustains life.

The following program was rendered: Reading, "Can Anybody Tell Why?"—Mrs. Mary Catey.

Reading, "Be a Booster"—Miss Esther Lathrop.

Reading, "The Old, Old Story"—Mrs. Eva Smith.

Duet, "Lullaby"—Miss Doris Richardson and Mrs. E. H. Strohmeler. Encore, "Smiling Through Life."

A short talk by Mrs. A. T. Lathrop, declaring that one of the outstanding remarks made by Miss Julia Spooner of Portland at the P. T. A. convention at Grants Pass, was the right of rural equality of children.

Commissioner Alford of Talent gave a short talk on roads, saying that poor roads are the fault of short funds.

R. E. Nealon came in and requested a vote of thanks, and we think he ought to have it, for he said if road men would put in more time at less expense we would get results.

In conclusion, Judge Sparrow is starting on a new role as health unit demonstrator, and said that every family should have one or two children a year.

During the grange session three candidates started on the mystery road.

"For the good of the order" Master Anderson read a list of Central Point business firms which are making very liberal donations to ward the building fund.

Bro. Sparrow read two communications, one on the big carnival of Live Oak grange, October 25, and the other, a cordial invitation from the American Legion to take part in a patriotic parade at Medford on Armistice day, November 11th.

Then came Will Perry of the Eagle Point district with a few remarks on the county and the behavior of the county court.

Bro. Harry Ward, still weak from a fainting spell, claimed he did not steal any chickens.

Bro. Mittelstaedt gave a short story.

As a final work of the grange, the secretary was instructed to send a word of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Otto Bohner in the loss of their infant son.

Among the visitors present were Messrs. Mittelstaedt, Perry, and Ward and Grover, all from Eagle Point.

SPECIAL PROGRAM AT CHURCH OPENS JUBILEE

Edison anniversary week got away to a good start last night in the special program put on in the First Methodist church.

The large congregation was intensely interested in the moving pictures, telling the story of light-making from prehistoric times to the present day.

H. L. Bromley, of Copco, supervised the installation of a beautifully illuminated cross, a background of silver decorated with purple and gold incandescent bulbs.

The people responded happily to the platform leadership of the pastor, Alexander G. Bennett, and reverently listening to some of the stories of the Gospel, illustrated by colored pictures reproduced from great artists' paintings.

Vocal solos were sung by Mrs. C. H. Packer and A. J. McDonough. A delightful organ program by Mrs. Mattie Huenergard was appropriate to the celebrational occasion.

The total value of all the donations in the world is about $5,000,000,000.
