ST. ANN TREASURE CHEST IS BURIED

St. Ann's Ttreasure chest, which for two weeks attracted admiration on the part of passersby, as it sat in state in the Weeks & Orr window, is now mysteriously buried. According to rumor, it will come up chuck full of treasures and priceless garments some time next week, and disclose its contents to an anxious feminine world.

Its next appearance will be at the home of Mrs. Annie Kellehor on South Oakdale, when a style show will be held with models on parade displaying the beautiful silken garments, some of which have been imported from foreign countries. The announcement as to when this show will be held will be made later.

GOOD SHOWING BY INDEPENDENCE SCH

Among the school districts of the county to show an increase in the census last week of persons between the ages of four and twenty years, is the Independence district near Phoenix. Last year, the annual school census figures were 67, but are reported to be 80 this year, with over 50 children attending school regularly.

A few years ago, it had been planned to transport the children to the Phoenix school instead of constructing a new building, and the transportation project lost only by three votes. Several residents of the district have expressed satisfaction over the result, pointing out that the expense of transporting the large number of students several miles to Phoenix would now almost be prohibitive.

The district is in the center of valuable farming and orchard country and prides itself on being able to pay its teachers better than the average salary. The school has two teachers, Miss Ruth Stewart of Medford teaching the first to fourth grades and Mrs. Minnie B. Law, the fifth to eighth grades.

The district is valued at $271,417.24 and its school board is made up of the following: Chester Fitch, chairman; W. H. Watt, S. Porter and Mrs. Jean Watt, clerk.

A LIFE IN THE BALANCE
Desperately they fought to save that tiny, precious life. Convulsions held the small limbs rigid. No time for a doctor. But there was hot water at hand—and only hot water will avail to save a baby's life in such a case. The time lost in heating it might have meant tragedy.
¶ You can't afford to be without a constant hot water supply. In case of sudden illness it is invaluable; and for convenience and comfort you need it every day. The HOTCOIL GAS WATER HEATER, product of the AMERICAN RADIATOR COMPANY, will supply enough for every need, for only a few cents a day. An automatic storage heater at low prices and on convenient payments.
