University California Studying Treatment Found By Italian Scientist — Tiny Germ Cause of Bane to Children.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—(Special)—Prevention and cure of measles is expected to result from the discovery of a serum being studied today in the Hooper Foundation laboratories of the University of California Medical school.

Professor Giuseppe Caronia, the eminent Italian scientist brought here from Rome as the A. P. Giannini research professor at the university, was announced yesterday as both the discoverer of the germ which is said to cause measles, and a serum for the prevention and cure of the disease.

So tiny is the germ, university doctors revealed, that it cannot be seen even by a microscope. By studying certain peculiarities of the disease and its after-effects, often serious and permanent, Prof. Caronia is said to have discovered its cause and developed the serum which he expects will prevent, or, at least, affect a speedy cure.

THE LUXURY HUSBAND

SYNOPSIS: Composer of a Broadway revue Ray can hardly believe his good fortune when Rita reveals the news. Rita is backing a proposed musical show. The book has been completed and Ray is offered the opportunity for which he has longed in his dreams—to write the score. Rita and Ray are in ecstasy—success, recognition, fame—when Rita's mention of Barbara shatters Rita's dreams. Then she learns for the first time that Ray is married. Devotedly loves his wife and hopes for a reconciliation. Ray leaves Rita's apartment a few minutes later whistling happily, but a broken-hearted girl remains behind.

Chapter 23
AN IRONIC LAUGH

INVITATIONS were already issued for the grand ball with which Barbara intended reopening her Long Island home. A large ballroom was being erected expressly for the purpose.

The ball, itself, was to be in the nature of a circus party. The interior of the hall was to be turned into the replica of a circus tent, the guests being asked on the invitations to come in circus costumes.

At first Barbara threw herself into the preparations with a sort of nervous frenzy, supervising everything personally. But soon she collapsed.

Unexpectedly tears came to Rita's eyes; Ray tried vainly to comfort her.

But there was something sardonic in his chuckle. Anyway, it aroused Rita's suspicion.

Later, as they were together at work in her apartment, she insisted upon knowing its cause. He told her. And, although she tried not to let him see it, she was afraid.

"Why should you go, Ray? They could find another sax to take your place. And Ray, if you do go, seeing your wife again, may make you decide to go back to her. Then, you'll forget all about working on this score—forget the dreams we've shared together. After all, if she's rich and there's no need for you to work—"

Ray, not understanding the sudden sharp jealousy that had driven her to speak as she had, said harshly:

"If you talk like that, Rita, you'll make me mad. Don't you know any better than that? Why, I wouldn't give up this chance for anything in the world."

"Now you wouldn't, but, maybe, should you see your wife again . . ."

Then Rita did a foolish thing. For no apparent reason her voice cracked and she found herself blinking back tears. One trickled down her nose and fell on the piano keys. Ray saw it and looked up at her in amazement.

"What's got you, Rita dear? This isn't like you at all. I may be dumb, but I can't make a bad or tall of it!"

The girl smiled at him wistfully and sniffed twice. What a dear stupid he was! A more conceited man would have sensed intuitively what ailed her!

"It's just that I don't want you to let down on this score," she lied. "Not after I've written such glowing accounts to Pete as to how we're getting along . . ."

"You know I wouldn't do that, Rita," he protested with an impatient gesture. Then, as though to humor her, "Look here, will this convince you? The ball should be over by two—that means I could get back here easily by three. That is not a whole lot later than we usually work and we can do a bit on it then. What do you say to that?"

She brightened, even essayed a laugh.

But Ray was uncomfortably aware that Rita's anxiety that night was assumed. From then on the true state of affairs began slowly to dawn upon him.

TURKEY CROP REPORT SHOWS INCREASE 1929

The report on the 1929 turkey crop by the bureau of agricultural economics indicates that production will exceed that of 1929 by about 9 per cent. The crop last year was about 4 per cent larger than in 1927, but about the same as in 1926, according to estimates.

Stocks of turkeys in storage on October 1 totaled, in the United States, 5,177,000 pounds or 16 per cent less than a year earlier, but about the same as the 5-year average on that date. Holdings in the three Pacific coast states were reported only 185,000 pounds, or about 30 per cent as large as on October 1, 1928.

The government report indicates that 52.2 per cent of the turkeys this year will be ready for the Thanksgiving market, 38 per cent for Christmas and 9.8 per cent later. Some observers feel that supplies of turkeys on the Thanksgiving market may be large enough to cause a very slow demand for poorly finished turkeys and that, therefore, it may be profitable for turkey growers to hold back unfinished birds for feeding until later in the season.

CONSTIPATION ruins hopes, saps strength. Yet thousands of sufferers have found the way to relieve and prevent this disease. Read how this man rid his system of constipation.

"During the three years before ALL-BRAN cured me, I experienced more embarrassing moments than I care to tell of. Being lifeless, dull, lazy and despondent, I could not keep my job. My friends didn't want my company and I was tired of being asked, 'What in the world is the matter with you?'"

"After spending much money for treatment, I finally found a doctor who advised me to use ALL-BRAN three times a day. I did this for three months and I didn't need to be told that I looked better. I felt better and acted better. I am still using ALL-BRAN every morning and have no trouble now whatsoever." (Name and address upon request.)

Modern Girl An Ancient Myth, Is View of Author

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(AP)—From the gangsters of Chicago to the Bedouins of the Sahara, Louis Golding, novelist, has searched in vain for the modern girl. His conclusion, as expressed in the Daily Chronicle, is that she does not exist; that she was a very ancient myth, among the hanging gardens of Babylon; that in Asia's set in Athens there were girls who did the equivalent of dangling jade cigarette holders and chain drinking; that the Victorian grandmother would have been outraged by her 18th century grandmother.

Active People want and need sugar

The "Fuel of Preference" in the body

AN EMINENT food authority recently stated that any person who has a very active body is likely to be always on the edge of the sugar reserve in his body (glycogen). "That is why," he said, "the soldier and athlete wants and needs sugar. That is why the active child wants and needs sugar." He went on to explain that sugar can be more easily and quickly converted into energy than any other food. He diet of every family and that any reducing diet, as well as any other diet, should contain sugar.

The best way for sugar to be eaten is as a flavor of other foods. In that way, it serves the double purpose of furnishing energy to the body and also of adding appetizing delight to other healthful foods. Sugar added to healthful grain cereals makes them welcome and enjoyable to growing children. Think of how many health-giving fruits are objectionable to the taste without sugar. Scientists tell us that we need the daily roughage of salads as well as cooked fruits and vegetables. Any good cook knows that adding sugar makes all of these welcome and pleasant to the palate. In addition to being the best and cheapest fuel for the body, sugar is nature's perfect flavor. It makes nearly all other foods more enjoyable. For health and enjoyment, there is no substitute for sugar. The Sugar Institute.
