

MINOR CRIMES ENRICH CITY TO TUNE OF $310

While the receipts for the city court for October were not as large as for the previous month or so, yet they enriched the city treasury by $310, according to Judge Taylor's monthly report, which will be presented to the city council at its next meeting.

Judge Taylor attributes the falling off in police court business over the month to the closing of the fruit harvesting season, when most of the itinerant fruit workers, whom he says the court records indicate perpetrate the minor crimes, leave the city.

In all, the city court collected the above named sum of money in 29 cases last month, and in addition investigated three cases which were not docketed.

Of the 29 cases, sixteen were for intoxication. Thirteen men forfeited $10 cash bail each, two men a cash bail of $15 each, and one man forfeited a cash bail of $25.

Five Disturb Peace. There were five cases for disturbing the peace, on which charge four men forfeited $10 cash bail each, and one a cash bail of $25. There was one possession of liquor case in which the culprit was fined $15.

The cases of traffic violations numbered five. Three of those arrested on this charge forfeited $10 cash bail each, one man was fined $10 and another was fined $15.

The above mentioned forfeitures, explained by the fact that the police on arresting persons for ordinary minor violations with no special features, accept cash bail, giving receipts thereof, for the arrested one to appear in court next day for trial, which they invariably do not.

Therefore the forfeited cash bails are really the same as fines administered in court. Of course, in cases of importance, or where exceptional circumstances surround the arrests, the accused are locked up in prison until their hearing is held.

But the police and other judicial officials approve this system, as it not only saves the authorities much time but also money, as the prisoners must be fed and otherwise cared for at the city's expense while incarcerated in the city prison awaiting trial.

BUDGET ELECTION NOTED SPEAKERS MEDFORD SCHOOLS TO ADDRESS MEN'S MONDAY 2 TO 7 CLUB MEET NOV. 13

All friends of the public schools are urged to spend a few minutes Monday afternoon or evening in turning out and visiting at the annual budget election for the Medford district, which will be held at the Junior high school building between the hours of 2 p. m. and 7 p. m.

No objection whatever has been raised to the school budget, which has been published along with date of election in the local newspapers several times since it was compiled by the budget committee and school board some time ago, thus again illustrating the harmony which has existed in the local schools for years past.

The citizens committee which approved the budget consisted of John C. Mann, Mark Jarmin, W. W. Allen, O. O. Alenderfer and E. E. Wilson.

Usually, because of the existing harmony the school budget elections in recent years have attracted a light vote, but all of approval, and while at tomorrow's election the vote will also undoubtedly be one of unanimous approval, it would be more complimentary to the school officials and the board of education if a large vote were cast.

The attention of voters is called to the fact that the present city council budget controversy only applies to the city government affairs, and has nothing whatever to do with the public school budget.
