If it weren't against the law to gamble, we'd lay a bet that the justice of the peace at Medford is a sportsman. We don't know his name, as it isn't mentioned in a dispatch from our Medford correspondent telling of the firing of a hunter who trespassed on the farm of Alice Hanley, headless of warning signs posted on the place. The hunter had to pay $25 and costs for "breaking into" the Hanley fields. If justice of the peace elsewhere would follow this one's example, they would do a lot toward promoting a better entente between farmers and hunters.—The Oregonian.

Six different supplies of dressed poultry were sold this forenoon at the city public market in a remarkably short time. By 10 o'clock there was only one dressed chicken left and it was purchased in a short time. One farmer reported he sold his supply in 15 minutes after he arrived, and other supplies were exhausted in an hour or so. Other departments of the market enjoyed heavy patronage and were also sold out in a short time.

Southern Oregon Law Enforcement Officers Told Social Change Cause Crime; Modern Youth at Cross Road

The average child of 14 years today has the sophistication that in years gone by was associated with a person 20 years and that condition has brought about serious changes that need serious study, if conditions are to be remedied, said Prof. Irving Vining last night, speaking before the Southern Oregon Law Enforcement Officers' association in session at Ashland.

The boys and girls of today are at the cross roads. They are floating on a sea of doubt, he told the officers. Home is not what it used to be before the day of the automobile and the present day mechanical conveniences, placing 35 slaves, or their equivalent, at the disposal of each United States citizen. Parental authority, in some cases, has nearly been relegated to another day by young America.

Church Loses Interest.

The church does not hold the position it formerly held, Prof. Vining told his listeners, and does not attract the interest of young people on such a large scale. Even sacred marriage vows have been questioned and trial marriages have been suggested, and in some cases followed. As a result of all this, there is little wonder that the jails and prisons of the country are crowded, principally with young men, whose spiritual training has been sadly neglected.

Touching the subject of prohibition, Prof. Vining told the officers that the question is the problem that will never be solved unless citizens are behind it as a whole. It is often the case, especially in this one, that voters vote restrictions upon others and not upon themselves. The government may send out armies of enforcement agents, but if they do not have the co-operation that is properly theirs, how can any law be enforced? he asked.

Jacksonville Vigilantes.

The speaker, in his opening remarks, referred to the vigilantes of Jacksonville many years ago, and told of their book of rules and by-laws being used as an example in an eastern university as embodying the foundations of justice with fair treatment for all. He told how a professor at Columbia University lectured on the book and gave credit to the early southern vigilantes for their wisdom in adopting such rules.

"You officers," said Prof. Vining in closing, "should leave here with a sympathy for the youth of the land and help them over the rough spots until they gain a better understanding of their responsibility. Help them whenever you can and by doing that you will also be helping yourselves in the cause of improved law observance."

Prof. Vining's speech was heartily received and was given following a few remarks by State Game Warden Harold Clifford, who reviewed the work of his department for the past 12 months. There were 481 game arrests and 628 of the arrested parties entered pleas of guilty, bringing in revenue of $26,081, of which one-half went to the counties in which the arrests were made.

There were more cases and more convictions of hunting deer at night than there have been for several years, Warden Clifford told listeners, and there were also more arrests made along public highways.

Pomeroy Speaks.

The first speaker on the evening's program was H. H. Pomeroy of Portland, chief deputy state fire marshal, who told of various experiences in his field.

Last night's meeting of the association, the first one to be held since February, was attended by 100 officers, who voted to hold the next by the middle of January at Klamath Falls, where a duck and goose dinner is promised. Last night's meal, prepared by the Lithia Springs Hotel, consisted of venison, furnished by the game department.

During the course of the banquet, entertainment on the banjo and guitar by Guy Bolden and Clark of Ashland was featured. A delightful harmonica solo was also rendered by Charles Cruickshank of the Chiloquin police force and a song was sung by a trio composed of Ted Gillenwater, Klamath county deputy district attorney, H. H. Pomeroy and Samuel Meihorn of the state fire marshal's office.

Mr. Gillenwater was toastmaster for the banquet and the meeting was later taken in charge by Guy Gordon of Roseburg, Douglas, has county district attorney. The attendance included officers from Portland, Lane, Douglas, Coos, Curry, Jackson, Josephine, Klamath and Lake counties and the meeting was declared to be the best held in the history of the organization.

As a special entertainment number, Miss Bernice Rhoades of the Shady Spring resort in the Siskiyou mountains, took part in several dance numbers.

AUTO THEFTS DECLINE, SAYS SPECIAL AGENT

Auto thefts over the state as a whole have shown a material decrease, according to Joe Keller of Portland, special agent in charge for the National Automobile Theft Bureau, who was in Medford today for a short time.

Auto owners in the state have begun to realize the necessity of locking their cars when parking them on the street and with that generally done, auto thieves are finding it difficult to steal autos.

A check made a year or two ago in this county revealed that out of 18 cars parked in a block, 46 were packed with the keys in the locks and the 47th was already unlocked. Keys are not left so frequently now.

All-Color Film Is Coming to Rialto

One of the screen's oddest, not to mention one of its most pretentious, romantic adventures, is promised local film followers when "The Mysterious Island" comes to the Rialto Theatre tomorrow. It is in color, dialogue and synchronized sound.

A visualization of one of Jules Verne's most extraordinary dreams "The Mysterious Island" gives realism to an adventure that carries its principals and its reviewers from the secret retreats of a mountainous island to the bottom of the sea and back again, into a land of fantasy and return.

"The Mysterious Island" presents a romance that is tender as it is unusual, with Lloyd Hughes and Jane Daly as the lovers, with Lionel Barrymore and Montagu Love attending the more dramatic episodes of the production.
