CHAPERONS IN SENATE IRK MOSES

Defends Self and Solon With Traffic Tutor—Hits Farm Lobby as King of Them All—National Granges Plan to Flay Hawley Tariff Bill.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, author of the application "Sons of Wild Jackasses" as applied to certain senatorial colleagues, ventured out into the West today ostensibly to visit his grandchildren in a Chicago suburb and parried questions about a conference with western Republicans that was understood to be scheduled.

The newspapermen who flocked to his hotel room to hear an encore of his remark about "jackasses" were treated to an exposition of his thoughts on the tariff, lobbies in general and specifically that of the farmers, and the senate as its own chaperon.

"Some members of the senate are putting reverse English on the constitution," he said. "Listen. Get this with a degree of accuracy: A constitutional provision holds that a member of the senate may not be held to accountability by his colleagues for what he says any other place than the senate floor. I am now led to conclude that a senator can be held to accountability in the senate for what he says outside the senate."

He spoke a word of defense for Senator Bingham of Connecticut, recently censured for using an employee of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association as a clerk.

"Nobody will say that Senator Bingham was not indiscreet," Senator Moses observed, "but his purpose was entirely praiseworthy. The senate shouldn't constitute itself guardian of the conduct of its members to the extent it has."

"We have seen Senator Bingham formally censured; we have seen the private correspondence of a senator the subject of criticism in the past ten days."

He said he would like to tell the tariff in its tracks because "it would be 'high duties on the things which manufacturing communities must eat and low duties on the things they have to make and sell in order to get things to eat.'"

And as for lobbies, "Why, the agricultural lobby," he asserted, "by far exceeds that of the manufacturers in number, influence—hesitate to say arrogance—and in effectiveness."

ST. PAUL, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Opposition to the new tariff schedules in the Hawley bill was expressed today by Louis J. Taber, Columbus, Ohio, master of the National Grange, who said the national convention in Seattle next week would consider resolutions condemning them.

Taber, with 217 representatives of Granges in eastern and central states, passed through here today enroute to Seattle for the convention which will be held November 13 to 22.

Also that the Auxiliary will hold a no-host luncheon at the Hotel Medford, Armistice day at 12 noon. The members of Medford post from Jacksonville will hold a carnival dance in the old U. S. But the automobile, worth its price, whether it be $7,000 or $700 will be in demand as much as ever.

Thanks to the labor government the people of India are to have some sort of independence, a "dominion status" or something of that kind.

It would seem dangerous for a nation of 40,000,000 to give any sort of ruling power to 200,000,000 Astuties.

However, the wise British can be trusted to make the voting or other self-governing powers of the Hindus as unreal as the phantom ruling powers of the rajahs.

It was mentioned here that inspection of the Boeing airplane works in Seattle, showed long lines of highly paid mechanics, not one native-born American among them.

Ten young Americans learn to play pool for one that learns a trade, which is sad. To educate the hands is to educate the brain.

Mr. Knudsen, president of Chevrolet, writes from the steamship Bremen, "Some time ago you observed that few native-born Americans learn a trade. I wonder if you realize what useful service you can render American industry by emphasizing often the importance and advantage of teaching young people a trade. Though they may never use it with their hands, it will develop their brains."

Some Americans think a trade is not good enough for their boys. They say, "I want my boy to seem to be somebody."

Mr. Knudsen, a good American, but not native born, learned a trade, worked at it many years. That is why he is somebody.

Henry Ford selected him to manage his production. General Motors took him from Ford, to manage Chevrolet production. And Knudsen has many millions of dollars, plus an interesting job.

BELLINGHONTE, Pa., Nov. 9.—(AP)—The plane of air mail pilot Jack Webster, reported overdue at the Cleveland air depot, was located today on Hattiesburg mountain, on the Gulf Eagle range. One of the fliers engaged in searching for Webster saw the plane on the mountain and notified the air depot here.

With a large crowd of women residents gathered at the Kellihor home, 1019 South Oakdale, throughout both the afternoon and evening, Friday, the fashion show staged by the St. Ann's Altar society of the local Catholic church, was pronounced thoroughly enjoyable by those who attended.

The parade of models, wearing the charming bodice outfits and exquisite lingerie adorned a continental outfit, a rose and black pajama set with a robe of black satin, the inside of which disclosed a patch work quilting effect, was one outstanding content of the chest.

Several other pairs of pajamas, including one in Nile green with a futuristic design, and a lavender and old lace combination were shown. The many pieces of linen were also on display in the home throughout the exhibition.

TOT RIDES IN PLANE TRAIN RIDE AWAITS

The distinction of having had an airplane ride before she ever stepped aboard a train, belongs to Peggy Garlock, six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Garlock of Medford. Peggy and her parents took the air in a Breeze cabin plane during the past week and looked at Medford from the clouds.

Sailing over her school, the playgrounds, the American Legion grounds and her grandmother's house, she exclaimed with glee over the new viewpoint. That she is going to be an aviatrix when she grows up, and take all the little boys and girls on free rides, is the present ambition as expressed by Peggy. After riding in an airplane, she is rather afraid that a train would seem too tame.
