UNEMPLOYMENT SEEN IN OREGON BY GRAM

That a condition of unemployment exists generally throughout the state and presents a serious problem at this time of year, was the statement made by C. H. Gram, state labor commissioner, of Salem this morning. Mr. Gram is on a tour of this section of Oregon checking up on the labor situation in the various towns.

He conferred this morning with Chris Gottlieb, head of the local branch of the state employment bureau at the Medford problem, in order to gather further data he interviewed heads of local industries and business concerns. While Medford is no worse than any other section of Oregon, she also has a surplus of unemployed men, according to Mr. Gram.
