to grasp a shadow. Let me snare in peace at my home. The hour will come, perhaps all too soon, in which I shall lose myself and hunt after a monstrous intangible shadow.

Second Prize Letter By Roberta Ward Hebb From my own experience and the observation of others in the musical world, I am most enthusiastic to outline why the study of music, particularly piano music, will benefit every child.

The piano has a particular educational value, because it employs all ten fingers and demands a kind of brain training that surpasses every study in school or college.

Moreover, the piano is an independent instrument that is, you do not have to have an accompanying instrument.

Personally, I like to refer to it as the "sistine"—the shrine of the most beautiful art in the world before which great masters have written compositions, bringing joy to all mankind.

Now, to enumerate some of the benefits of the study of the piano. When one has had a course in musical training, his mind is forced to think about four times as quickly as the ordinary man's.

Then, music insures accuracy. When you have to play note after note, thousands of them—you have to train your muscles and mind to hit just the right note at the right time.

The training in memory is invaluable. Poise is another thing that music cultivates—the ability to make yourself do what you want to do at command—in other words, self-control.

The qualities of concentration and self-control are also developed through the study of the piano.

A higher standard of ethics and culture, with a higher spiritual uplift, are noticeably the result of music training.

Financial independence is helped by the study of piano. There is nothing that will keep the child's interest closer to home than music.

In addition to all this, the study of piano gives one a means of refreshment feeding one's mind from daily affairs and cares.

It is possible the most distinguished social attainment. The study of piano music will enable the child to better appreciate the variety of wonderful music brought into our homes by means of the radio.

Statistics prove that children who study music make better grades than students who do not. It is true that some of the world's most foremost men enthusiastically credit music to be of unquestionable importance to their careers.

the Bethlehem Steel Works, known as "America's Steel King," started out as a professional music teacher and organist. He never ceased to express his gratitude for the mental drill he received in music.

Many of the famous statesmen in the world have had a practical musical training, including Ex-Vice President Dawes; Earl Balfour, former prime minister of England; Benito Mussolini, prime minister of Italy, and Premier Paderewski of Poland, and many others.

Cyrus H. Curtis, most famous American publisher, is a practical musician. Incidentally, his daughter, Mrs. Edward Bok, has given twelve million dollars for musical education.

Gio. Eastman, "king of the kodak business," also gave twelve million dollars for a music school in Rochester, when business men donate like this, surely music is more important than a "merchandise" to everyone who knows.

The statement by Wm. Bosan, superintendent of Chicago public schools, "It is more necessary for the child to study music (happy mathematics)" proves again the present recognition of the vital importance of a musical education.

In conclusion, not to study music properly is to miss one of the greatest of human blessings, an unending joy to everyone who knows, for truly, "Music study exalts life."

Years for a more comprehensive study of piano music by every child.
