

BIG UTILITY EXPANSION PLAN TOLD

Electrical, Gas and Street Railway Corporations Will Spend Billion and Half in Improvements and New Construction Is Report to Hoover—Aid to Prosperity.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(P)—President Hoover was informed today by representatives of the public utility corporations that these organizations would spend approximately $1,500,000,000 in improvement and expansion programs during the coming year.

This information was conveyed on the basis of a survey made at a meeting of the utilities representatives yesterday in New York City.

It indicated probably the largest construction program for any single industry in the country and added enormously to the grand total reported to the president at the series of recent business conferences at the White House.

More than a score of representatives of utilities companies gathered at the White House for a conference with the chief executive. Three separate reports were submitted, one by the electric light and power group; another by the representatives of the larger gas companies and the third was spokesman for the street railway industry.

Matthew S. Sloan, president of the National Electric Light association, issued this statement thru the White House:

"The electric light and power, manufactured and natural gas, and electric railway utilities contemplate the expenditure of $1,400,000,000 during 1930 for new construction and expansion of facilities, an increase over the corresponding expenditures for 1929 of $110,000,000."

In addition to this amount they will spend to maintain existing properties $410,000,000."

Milk Investigator Seeking To Rid Oregon Herds of Abortion Through Uniform Grade Rules

In view of the fact M. M. Miller of Portland, the milk investigator of the U. S. health service, who is fostering a movement to have each Oregon municipality adopt regulations to provide for a general government standard of milk, was recently in Medford interviewing local inspector, C. P. Austin and city officials on this matter relative to having them pass an ordinance here early in December, the following from the Oregonian as to the passage of such an ordinance in Portland, is enlightening locally:

Raw milk from herds that are not free from contagious abortion will be grade B, under the new milk ordinance which M. M. Miller, milk investigator of the United States public health service, is drafting to be presented to the city council, it developed at a conference of milk experts in the city laboratories.

While such milk could not be sold as grade A raw, regardless of other conditions at the dairy, it could be sold as grade A milk if pasteurized, said Mr. Miller. Time, however, would be given to the dairymen to clean up their herds, and they would be expected to obtain certificates from the state livestock sanitary board to the effect that the herds were abortion-proof.

Veterinarians were called into conference yesterday on this phase of the milk ordinance, as well as experts from the State college. Later a conference will be held with the dairymen on the subject. It was pointed out that practically all of the raw milk producers to the city's milk shed now are undertaking the testing of their herds for contagious abortion.

Steps also were expected to be taken by the state livestock sanitary board to require all cattle to be abortion tested before they can be sold at public auction. The chief trouble in connection with the campaign against contagious abortion is the fact that there is now no statute providing for the payment of dairymen for the stock they will lose, as there is in connection with tuberculous tests.

This serious abortion can advertise that fact, and those who have made no effort to clean up will not be helped by such advertising from a competitor.

Because of the time that such tests would take, the veterinarians suggested that ample time be allowed for the dairymen to meet the conditions, and both Mr. Miller and Mr. Jennings declared that was the city's purpose. Commissioner Mann pointed out that the dairymen whose herds are free from contagious abortion can advertise that fact, and those who have made no effort to clean up will not be helped by such advertising from a competitor.

Proposed Ordinance Outlined.—"This is the first time that such a provision has been placed in an ordinance," said Mr. Miller, "but I believe that Oregon is ready for such a step. Oregon is way out in the lead in its work on this problem, and I am very happy that it is. The majority of dairymen who would produce grade A raw milk have the problem in hand now, either thru the elimination of infected cattle or through the inauguration of tests."

The ordinance proposed would require an infected cow to be labeled with the letter "A" and isolated from the herd, and the milk could not be sold as grade A raw milk. Tests of the herds would have to be made every six months and the reactors taken out of the herds.

Because of the time that such tests would take, the veterinarians suggested that ample time be allowed for the dairymen to meet the conditions, and both Mr. Miller and Mr. Jennings declared that was the city's purpose. Commissioner Mann pointed out that the dairymen whose herds are free from contagious abortion can advertise that fact, and those who have made no effort to clean up will not be helped by such advertising from a competitor.
