

CANNED MUSIC IS BIG PROBLEM FOR SPANISH PLAYERS

MADRID.—(AP) Madrid's musicians and orchestra are faced with the crisis of losing their jobs in movie houses and legitimate theaters because of the invasion of foreign competition, said Humberto Gabrieli, secretary of the Association of Orchestra Professionals of this city.

Foreign "talkies," foreign jazz and foreign actors have caused the crisis, he explained. "We do not want to see the same thing happen in Spain as has occurred in the United States after the introduction of sound pictures, but Americans are already sending their mechanical music devices to Madrid with the announcement that they are prepared to produce and market Spanish sound and voice films," Gabrieli said. "This is a serious problem. Mechanical music can be adapted to the use of legitimate theaters and the invasion of American jazz bands, particularly negroes, aggravates the crisis."

Along with many others who have studied the situation, he favors nationalization of the sound film industry in Spain with adequate protection by labor restrictions for Spanish musicians. Three of Madrid's largest moving picture houses have installed devices for sound pictures and have discharged their orchestras and several others are preparing to follow suit. A number of years ago the opera house was closed in Madrid, which automatically released an orchestra of 80 musicians while casinos have recently been employing various forms of mechanical devices to provide music for their patrons.

Many French and German shows invade Spain each season, performing at low prices, and this is hurting the Spanish stage also, Senor Gabrieli said.

CONGREGATIONS IN JOINT SERVICE TO OFFER UP THANKS

The Protestant churches of Medford gathered in the First Methodist church, Rev. Alex Bennett, pastor, for a joint Thanksgiving service Thursday morning. The church was filled with worshippers who desired to keep alive the memories which George Washington, initiated by his proclamation as first of our presidents and which President Hoover followed this year.

The quartet of the church furnished the music for morning. Rev. J. B. Conder of the Methodist church south delivered the address, and stressed the many reasons for gratitude of the American people. Among other things he said that we should be especially glad for the way in which America was leading in world peace. After pointing out these many reasons for real Thanksgiving he also urged the nation not to be too well content with their advances in civilization. Not, at least, until we remembered our duties towards those less fortunate, who, even though living in this land of plenty, were in need and actually suffering.

In the main, however, Rev. Mr. Conder presented our country as rich in its blessings, not only to be remembered on Thanksgiving day but every day of the year. Dr. Funk of the Lutheran church presided; Rev. W. H. Eaton of the Baptist church read the presidential proclamation; Carman E. Mell of the Christian church read the scripture; Rev. C. B. Porter of the Presbyterian church led in prayer, and Dr. C. G. Lanston of the Unitarian church pronounced the benediction.

The offering was turned over to the Community Chest.
