

Joan Bennett Star of Craterian Show

Make the time the 50's, the scene a river boat, the characters a girl and a gambler.

Let the girl be an effin blond, high-heeled and scornful; the man a dark-eyed scamp, with a gaze as steady as the fingers that flip cards after winning card from the pack. Set the game in a high-ceiled saloon at midnight, make the stakes the girl's fortune against the girl's honor, and you have "The Mississippi Gambler," a talking picture engaging the talents of Joseph Schildkraut and Joan Bennett at the Craterian tomorrow.

Southern romance is this, schildkraut, one-time Theater Guild star, is the handsome gambler—a role more manly but quite as picturesque as his Ravenel in Edna Ferber's "Show Boat."

"The Mississippi Gambler" is treated to the modern improvements of sound and conversation. Excited and a flourish are scenes by revelry around the Delta Belle. The wash of waves, thrills of dance music, an ech of negro harmony enrich the story.

"Sherlock Holmes" Is the Rialto Attraction

Detectives may come and detectives may go, but Sherlock Holmes apparently never dies. He is being drawn from the actual statistics obtained from the reference department of the New York public library.

Despite the tremendous popularity of some of Holmes' more recent successors and imitators, the great figure from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's brain continues to hold his place against all comers in the hearts of the reading public.

Now "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" has been made into an all-talking picture and will show in the Rialto theater, starting tomorrow. Clive Brook is featured in the role of the master detective and a strong supporting cast has been assembled for the principal roles in this new show world mystery play.
