JUNIOR CLASS OF CENTRAL PT. WILL PRESENT COMEDY

The junior class of the Central Point high school will present on Friday evening, December 12, its annual play, Larry Johnson's "The Mummy and the Mumps."

The well chosen cast has been working for weeks in order to attain a high degree of perfection in its presentation. The play is a 2 1/2-hour, 3-act comedy and promises the audience an evening of fun.

The cast of characters is as follows: Sir Hector Fish, who impersonates the mummy, Irvine Hall; Francis Briscoe, who impersonates Hector, John Brady; Wm. Laidlaw, who helps as much as possible, Raymond Wheland; James Slamon, (Hacker) who has three men's work to do, but doesn't do it, Gerald Morris; Perkins, the sheriff who does his duty, Delmar Smith; Anna Hampton, a western girl, Merle Hedegren; Maude Miller, an eastern girl, Evelyn Smith; Dulcie Dumble, rather beautiful, but very dumb, Audrey Garman; Agatha Laidlaw, founder of most exclusive school in New England, Iola Carr; Phoebe Beebe, reporter on the staff of the Daily Deliverance, Lola Hood.

The scene is laid in an exclusive girls' school which is headed by a distinguished archaeologist, bringing with him a mummy that comes to life. Complications multiply and one situation crowds closely upon another, each more uproariously funny than its predecessor.

The hilarity is promoted by the imitable man of all work, who has three men's work to do, but doesn't do it, by Brisky the giddy youth who impersonates Sir Hector, and by his equally giddy pal Bill, by the prize "Dumb Dora" among the girl pupils; by a terrible nose-bleed reporter, and by a hick sheriff.

Once a Cowboy, Now War Secretary Hurley Is Well Liked in Washington

By E. A. Brophy. (A. P. Feature Service Writer.) WASHINGTON—(AP)—Personality plus is the way Patrick J. Hurley, now secretary of war, is often described.

And the description is heard in the busy cubicles of the gray granite war, state and navy buildings where the country's military affairs are administered by multi-clad army men.

Across the Indian-straight shoulders of the assistant war chief deseended the mantle of war department responsibility when James W. Good lost his courageous fight for life in Walter Reed hospital.

Hurley is a lawyer by vocation. For more than two decades, the military has been his avocation. He came into the war department, by Hoover appointment, last spring and his advent has been likened to one of those hearty breezes of the wide open spaces that have played so important a part in his life. Just under 50 now, the assistant secretary of war was born in the Choctaw nation, Indian Territory. He roamed the plains as cowboy-puncher; took a fling at mining; and at 25 became an attorney in Tulsa, Okla., where he has lived since.

He carries his six feet odd with an erectness that testifies to his active life. He is easily one of the handsomest men in Washington public life.

An ability to make people like him, and to listen attentively and courteously to the troubles of anyone in his department — be he the troubled one of high, low or intermediate rank — are commented upon as facets of his character brought out during his tenure as assistant secretary of war.

Colonel Hurley — he reached the grade of lieutenant-colonel during the World war and now is a reserve colonel — began his military service in 1902 as a captain of cavalry of the Indian Territorial volunteer militia. From 1914 to 1917 he was a captain in the Oklahoma national guard.

During the World war his legal ability in negotiating the armistice agreements with the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg won him the distinguished service cross, and a silver star citation was conferred upon him for a volunteer reconnaissance under heavy enemy fire.

Colonel Hurley married Miss Ruth Wilson, daughter of Adm. Henry B. Wilson, United States navy, in 1919. There are three Hurley children — Patricia, Ruth and Wilson.

If he has any hobby, it is flying and riding in airplanes. He is not a pilot, but he has mastered the knack of tooling a plane under certain conditions.

Besides being an attorney, Colonel Hurley is president of the First Trust and Savings bank of Tulsa, and a director of the First National bank there.

LONG NEEDED RAIN AT LAKE O' WOODS

Visitors at Lake O' the Woods yesterday reported that more moisture had fallen during 12 hours Saturday night and Sunday than in the past eight months. This will probably bring the lake back to normal by next spring.

Rangers and crews have been working on the roads, and now have them in good condition. A new road to the lake has been surveyed. A heavy snowfall yesterday will make it impossible for motorists to reach the lake any more this year.
