BRINGING UP FATHER

THE NEBBS—Her Father's Daughter

Little Yarns of Yuletide

CHRISTOPHE ESTHETS
By DONALD SEYMOUR

The catbed house of brown stone on Fifth avenue was the place Judith Wilbur called home.

Built by her father in the '80s, it was engulfed now by business, but Judith kept it for its memories. For two months a year, at the spring and autumn equinoxes of the social season, its windows were unboarded and Cortland Wilbur's widow presided at gay parties.

The rest of the year Judith roved pleasure-bent from Bar Harbor to Naples to Miami Beach. Then the mansion was dark, and its custodian was Christophe, Swiss houseman.

In mid-December, Christophe conceived a reckless caprice. Judith was wintering, as usual, in Florida. She'd never know, so Judith Wilbur called home.

It was noon when Christophe's wife said she must take the children home. Christophe packed them off, and returned to the drawing-room to face his mistress alone.

"Of course, Christophe," Judith said, "you don't expect to stay on here after such a misappropriation of my home."

There was a pause, then: "My sister needs a man for her Long Island place. How would you like to move your brood to the caretaker's house there? I'll arrange it."

Christophe stood in the doorway, twining his cap.

"Clean things up here before you go," commanded Judith. "And thank you and your family—now she flashed at him a smile that found reflection in his own face—"for a very merry Christmas."

MRS. WRIGHT HOSTESS BROWNSBORO DINNER

BROWNSBORO, Ore., Dec. 20.—(Special) Mrs. C. W. Wright was hostess at a dinner last Tuesday evening for the purpose of demonstrating the use of aluminum utensils and new methods of cooking.

Those present included Mr. Counter, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Culbertson and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. Stanley and son, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rohrer and son Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Poole, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hansen and children, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hansen and son Donald, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. L. Blasse and children, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Butler and William Swain. The men of the Rock Gas company who installed the lights in the Wright home for the evening, were also present at the dinner.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT IN ROGUE RIVER STORES

ROGUE RIVER, Ore., Dec. 20.—(Special) Rogue River merchants are exhibiting the Christmas spirit. Clever decorations appear in the windows of the Kewpie confectionery and O'Kelly's general mercery and clothing stores. The latter has placed small Christmas trees before his place.

"Won't you introduce me?"

Christmas eve he took his wife, their five-year-old Amelia and Baby Johann to the empty Wilbur house for an evening around a roaring fireplace.

The four sat on the floor and told Christmas stories.

At a few minutes to 8 Judith Wilbur climbed into a taxi at the Pennsylvania station and told the driver to take her to the St. Regis. Fine business, having to return to New York in mid-winter; but if she could sell that seventh avenue corner she'd be well rid of it. Judith never trusted others with her major business deals.

As the cab whirled up Fifth avenue she looked out upon her home and thought she saw a gleam of light through the shuttered windows. At the St. Regis a whim turned her back on foot to the mansion.

Christophe heard a step in the hall and turned to see his mistress in the doorway. She said: "Is it a party? Won't you introduce me?"

Christophe blanched, then bowed low.

"Mrs. Wilbur: My little flock! My wife and our babies—Amelia, Baby Johann!"

Judith seemed darkly amused. She tossed her coat into a corner and her erstwhile hosts masked their uneasiness with silence. Amelia saved the situation. Fishing from her blouse a moist streak of candy she thrust it at Mrs. Wilbur.

"Thank you, pretty little girl," said Judith. "What lovely yellow hair!"

Christophe got more logs, and Amelia grew visibly friendly.

The children listened apace while Judith recalled for them other Christmas eves in the great house. And at last, when Baby Johann had fallen asleep and Amelia was drowsing, Judith lifted her gaze from the fireplace and began giving directions.

The children were to hang their stockings from the mantel. Christophe's wife was to get linens from the closet and make beds for her brood. Christophe was to go to the Ninth avenue flat, bring back

WILLIAMS CREEK

WILLIAMS CREEK, Ore., Dec. 20.—(Special) Rev. and Mrs. John Heetebly who have been visiting their son Phillip Heetebly at Williams Creek for the last two weeks, returned to their home at Winters, Calif.

Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Pennington who lately purchased the Fred Powers home, came in from California last week and spent a few days with their parents, going on to Yoncali, Ore., Monday.
