Motorists are cautioned by Oregon State Motor association that Oregon grape and Christmas greens cut from bushes and trees along the roadside may cost considerably more than those purchased.

The legal department of the association points out that the cutting of bushes, shrubs and trees along highway rights of way is a misdemeanor and is punishable by fine and imprisonment. "Permission should be obtained in every case before Christmas greens or trees are cut," warns the motor association, "as action may be taken by the owners of private property by the state or by the government."

How long do wild ducks live? A pintail duck, caught in California, recently with a band around its leg, placed there by the United States department of agriculture's migratory bird banding staff at Bear River, Utah, showed that the bird had been living at least 12 years, as that time had elapsed since the banding operation. Twelve years is believed to be a record age for wild ducks.—The Oregonian.
