CHARACTER studies of Edith Mason as Marguerite in "Faust," and Alexander Kipnis as the Cardinal in "The Jewess" presented by the Chicago Civic Opera Company, are shown above.

A STRIKING STUDY IN GEOGRAPHY is pictured above. While vacationers, clad in bathing costumes, were making merry on beaches in the southland, King Winter was tightening his grip on the north. Two tiny three-year-old sun worshippers—Frank M. McCraw, Jr., of Anniston, Ala., and Julia Ahlman of Atlanta, Ga.—are shown in the center picture above, making "whoopie" at Miami Beach, Fla. Little Lorena Henson of New York City is shown at the left above feeding a hungry squirrel in Central Park after New York City's first snowfall. Gordon Park in Cleveland, O., shown at the left below, which until recently was aflame with autumn leaves, was turned from a brilliant painting to a mellow work of art as the heavy flakes drifted down. The storm-lashed ocean breaking over the promenade at Penzance on the coast of Cornwall, England, is shown in the center below. And Dorothy Mackaill, Hollywood cinema actress, is shown at the extreme right, basking in the sunshine at a Catalina Island resort.

TWO BABY DIPLOMATS are pictured here. They are Myrrha and Juan Carlos Barrera. Their father, Senator Dion Carlos Barrera, is secretary of the Mexican embassy in Washington. The youngsters are well known in the capital.

CHARACTERS IN THE MIRACLE PLAY produced by the Harvard Dramatic Club are shown above. They are Julia Bygrave of Concord, Mass., as Mary, and R. H. Jones of New Gardens, L. I., as Joseph.

CHARMING Miss Maria Sacasa, above, daughter of the Nicaraguan minister to the United States, makes her debut in Washington society this season.

LAST OF THE "POLAR BEARS" of the A. E. F.—75 soldiers who died in North Russia—were brought home recently aboard the S. S. President Roosevelt. This unusual picture shows the escort of honor standing at salute over the caskets as the ship paused by New York City's skyline.

THIS BUST of the late Georges Clemenceau is one of the many works of art in the new Rodin Museum in Philadelphia.

TRUE ARABIC STYLE OF ARCHITECTURE was followed in constructing the administration building, shown above, which Glenn H. Curtis, pioneer airplane manufacturer, presented to the city of Opa Locka, a suburb of Miami, Fla. Residences, stores, garages and even names of the streets in Opa Locka are in Arabic style.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER III—23 years old and just out of Princeton—went to work recently at 26 Broadway, headquarters of the far-flung Rockefeller interests. He is pictured above at his desk as he began "helping father."
