U. S. HAS VAST INCOME BOOST IN PAST DECADE

American Income Increased Over 23 Billions Between 1909 and 1918 Is Report of Bureau—Had Shrinkage in 1921.

NEW YORK—(United Press.)—Figures revealing vast growth in the realized income of the population of continental United States were made public recently by the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Estimated in current dollars, Americans' income increased by more than $23,770,000,000 in the 10-year period between 1909 and 1918. The total in the earlier year was $65,949,000,000; in the later year, $89,719,000,000. These compared with a national income in 1909 of $29,605,000,000.

These advance figures were taken in advance from a statistical report undertaken by the bureau over a period of four years. This investigation was in the hands of Dr. Willford I. King and a corps of assistants, all under the general supervision of Professor Edwin P. Gray and Wesley C. Mitchell, director of research.

The full report, soon to be issued will correct, revise and supplement in detail figures incorporated in the report of recent economic changes made last spring for President Hoover's committee on recent economic changes.

Shrinkage in 1921. An almost steady upward trend of the national income during the last decade is indicated in the advance statement. The only lapse since 1919 came in the period of deflation in 1921 when there was a shrinkage of over ten billion dollars.

Commenting on the total of realized income the bureau's report draws attention to the fact that the figures do not include any allowance for the income which might be imputed to housewives and householders for services rendered to their own families, nor the value of goods and services received by employees in the form of expense accounts, nor money earned through odd-job employment. It is pointed out that the first two classes of items are so great in value that, were they included, the total income figures might be largely increased. Further, it is stated that the total of realized income does not include any income arising from changes in the value of property.

Per Capita Incomes. One of the tables included in the bureau's report indicates that the per capita realized income, when measured in dollars current at the various dates, more than doubled between 1909 and 1929 and has since been steadily increasing until in 1928, the average per capita income for all inhabitants of the United States amounted to $749. For the family of five members this would make an income of $3745. As a matter of fact, the report points out, the total realized income is far from being equally divided. In 1928 the average person working for a money return received $1,828.

GARDENER THANKS KIND DONORS FOR PURSE AND HORSE

S. S. Neilson, 67-year-old gardener, who on December 6 was the tragic victim of a fire at his place on Capitol Hill which swept away his entire earthly fortune—a barn, a buggy top, garden equipment and worst of all his beloved horse—has made a New Year's resolution.

As soon as the spring weather sets in he is going back to work harder than ever before, in an attempt to assure himself an independent livelihood for the remainder of his days.

Moved by the elderly man's loss coming into the Christmas season, a number of Capitol Hill neighbors, led by Herman Powell and the role of Santa Claus in his behalf and presented Mr. Neilson with a purse of $58. The Humane society notified him that he is to receive a horse, several other gifts, cash to him from unknown sources, and the gardener who has always been characterized by an independent nature, found it hard to stem the tide of tears that just would force themselves to his fading eyes.

He doesn't exactly know who to thank for such a flood of generosity, so he asked The Mail Tribune to do it for him. It is the knowledge of these new friends, he said, that is giving him the courage to carry out his New Year's resolution.
