VALLEY TO SEE MORE SNOWFALL

Forecast for Tuesday Snow and Colder Temperature—Five-Inch Depth in Medford Registered—Boon to Crops—Two Feet Deep in Siskiyou—Many Cars Find Ditch.

The snow storm which began Saturday evening and has practically been continuous since up to 2 o'clock this afternoon, during which time five inches accumulated in the ground, despite the fact that the snow was of the soft wet variety and much of it melted away fast, bids fair to continue as the weather forecast is for unsettled weather tonight and Tuesday, with snow and colder temperature tonight.

This five inches in Medford and vicinity is more snow than has been seen here at one time for years past, and is very "very unusual." In addition to this five inches remaining on the ground since the storm started Saturday evening, in that time the snow that melted away amounted to 2 1/2 of an inch of precipitation up to 5 a. m. today.

Boon to Crops This snow storm, which despite its causing much inconvenience, is generally regarded as a great boon for the various crops and to insure plenty of water for irrigation next summer.

While five inches of snow was accumulating in Medford, forming slush on the pavements and sidewalks, making auto traffic dangerous, and causing everyone to watch their steps to avoid falls, the snow was much heavier in the high hills and in the mountains surrounding the valley.

Wires Down In the way of damage caused a number of minor accidents, occurred today thru autos skidding. Due to the snow causing wires to fall the Mail Tribune was without Associated Press service much of today mainly because of wires being down north of Grants Pass.

The heavy snow accumulating on awnings broke down a number of such throughout the business district. Snow this forenoon on the Pacific highway over the Siskiyou mountains was two feet deep, and still falling heavily, causing auto traffic some difficulty, although the highway maintenance crew worked all last night with rotary snow plows to keep the road clear. The depth was said to be nearly

CHAS. B. MOORES STATE PIONEER DIES. PORTLAND

Active in Oregon Political, Historical and Educational Circles for Half Century—Funeral Service in Portland.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Charles B. Moores, 80, Oregon pioneer and for more than a half century active in political, historical and educational circles of the state, died at the family residence yesterday.

He was born in Benton county, Missouri, August 6, 1849, and was brought to Oregon in a covered wagon by his father in 1852. Moores was graduated from Willamette university in 1870 and then studied law at the University of Charles B. Moores.

Michigan, where he received his degree of bachelor law. He returned to Salem to practice and became a trustee of the Willamette university, a position he held 53 years.

He was chairman of the Republican central committee from 1912 until 1914 and during that time was manager of President Taft's campaign in Oregon. In 1880 he served as chief clerk in the Oregon house of representatives and two years later was appointed private secretary to Governor Moody.

For 14 years he was director and vice-president of the Oregon Historical society. Besides his widow, he is survived by one daughter, three sons, and a brother, A. N. Moores of Salem. Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Portland.

RECOVER BODIES TWO MOVIE MEN

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan. 6.—(AP)—The bodies of Kenneth Hawks, motion picture director, and Theo Harris, studio property man, two of the 10 victims of last Thursday's midair crash of two airplanes engaged in filming a movie thriller over the Pacific ocean, were recovered from the sunken wreckage of one of the planes today.

Hearty Breakfast Down on the Farm Makes Real Men

CHICAGO.—(AP) Pickled red cabbage and cheese are among the things which, taken plentifully for breakfast, make men in the open spaces. This discovery was turned up here by a radio questionaire, sponsored by WLS, through which thousands of farmers and others were asked to tell what they eat for breakfast.

SENATOR DUNN, ASHLAND, SEEKS RENOMINATION

State Senator George Dunn of Ashland, today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for state senator in the May primary and will seek re-election in the November election. Senator Dunn is one of the well-known and influential figures in the state senate, having served two terms in that body, having been first elected in 1922. Previous to that time he had served one term in the House of Representatives in 1895.

During his senate service, Ashland has secured the Southern Oregon Normal school and to obtain all that is possible for the Normal is one of the aims of Mr. Dunn in seeking re-election this session.

While in the senate Mr. Dunn has served on the roads and highways committee, on the education committee, banking committee and fish and game committee and has introduced a considerable volume of legislation which has been favorably acted upon.

To protect the Rogue River from uncontrolled power development which would ruin the stream as a sportsman's paradise, is one of the aims of Mr. Dunn who is interested in the tentative legislative plans of the Oregon Sportsman's association.

Announcement of Mr. Dunn of his plans to be a candidate for the Republican nomination, is made at the request of his friends. Numerous other candidates have been mentioned, but it is anticipated that no further candidates will declare for the primary nomination.

French Suffragists Announce Militant Campaign for Votes

By Hazel Reavis. (Associated Press Staff Writer) PARIS.—France's Mrs. Panhuret says that 1928 is going to be a fireworks year with French militants unless the government shows signs of assisting women to get municipal voting rights. She is Madame Maria Verone, white-bait of the French League for Women's Rights, which numbers several hundred thousand members, all pledged to a militant platform.

The newly formed government of Andre Tardieu with manifold internal questions pressing and world important foreign problems to face, has been given a month of grace by the "militantes." After that the trouble starts. The feminists are tired of using a polite "if you please" and getting nothing, says their leader. Therefore, unless the government acts they will change to a series of "gimmicks."

The feminists' big grievance at present is that they cannot get the

STORM AND LUCK MOCK AIR RESCUE

Eielson Searchers Wreck One Plane, Another Is Lost in Wild Country and Third Is Storm Bound at Nulato—Two Open Planes Reach Siberia Before Blizzard.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 6.—(AP) Adverse luck, running hand in hand with Alaskan storms, today continued to mock the efforts of northern aviators to stage an aerial hunt for their lost comrades Cerien Eielson and Carl Borland, who have been missing for nearly two months.

Three powerful cabin planes, rushed here from Seattle and put at the disposal of Arctic-hardened Canadian pilots, were down, one wrecked, one apparently lost and the other weather bound at Nulato, half-way between here and Nome. Two open cockpit planes operated by Pilots Joe Cronson and Harold Gillam, American fliers, who managed to reach North Cape, Siberia, from Nome recently, also were held down because the weather of northeastern Siberia made flying impossible.

Eielson and Borland disappeared last November 9 while flying from Teller to the fur trading ship Nanuk. The Nanuk is frozen in the ice near North Cape and now serves as the Siberian base for rescue operations.

One Plane Wrecked With one of the cabin planes already smashed up as the result of an attempted takeoff from Nome several days ago, the two others left here Saturday but also failed to reach Nome.

Arriving over the mouth of the Koyuk river, at the head of Norton bay, the two planes ran into a blinding blizzard and became separated. The one piloted by Matt Nieminen and carrying Major H. C. Decker and Mechanic Sam Macauley, retraced its course back over the treacherous tundra to Nulato and landed. The other, piloted by Pat Reid and carrying Mechanic William Hughes and Jim Hutchinson, failed to show up either at Nome or Nulato.

Although Reid's plane was believed to be down in the wild stretch of country between Nulato and Nome, no great apprehension was felt for the three men aboard, assuming that they had landed without mishap. The plane was well provisioned and the men equipped with heavy clothing.

Frank Dorband, Nieminen's flying companion, who a few days ago was withdrawn from the rescue work and ordered to take a rest, took off from Nome yesterday and flew 200 miles inland hoping to sight Reid's plane. Late last night, from Solomon, 36 miles from here, where he was forced down, Dorband reported he had not sighted the overdue plane.

Nieminen made ready at Nulato to go in search of Reid at the first opportunity.

SAYS ACTRESS WAS SLAYER OF FILM DIRECTOR

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 6.—(Copyrighted by the United Press) Otis Hefner, long-missing key witness in the William Desmond Taylor murder mystery found by a United Press reporter, has repeated and amplified secret disclosures made to former Governor Richardson and the state prison board in 1926 which resulted in his release from Solson to save his life.

Answering direct questions of the United Press representative, Hefner named Taylor's slayer as a moving picture celebrity. Hefner explained he mixed with Edward Sands, employed by Taylor, in the southern California narcotic ring in supplying dope to Taylor.

On the night Taylor was murdered, Hefner said he went to the house with Sands and saw the person responsible leaving the premises. A few minutes later Sands discovered the body.

Hefner declared himself as still willing to go before the grand jury and aid in clearing up the eight year old mystery.

SLAYER OF YOUNG WIFE CONFESSES

Family Troubles Blamed By Utah Youth for Shooting Estranged Wife, Mother and Stepfather—Jammed Gun Thwarts Suicide—Paroled for Former Shooting Scrape.

FARMINGTON, Utah, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Preston Thatcher, prosecuting attorney of Davis county, today prepared to file first degree murder charges against Delbert Green, 26, for the slaying of his young wife, her mother and stepfather, late Saturday night.

Green, who fled from the scene of the killings while officers from three counties combed the valley for him, was arrested in bed at his Ogden, Utah, apartment a few hours later and admitted the slayings, officers said. He said family troubles "drove me to it." The pistol alleged to have been used in the murders was found in Green's overcoat pocket. He offered no resistance when officers entered his room.

The shooting took place on a farm east of Layton, Utah, six miles north of here, where Green's wife had gone to see her mother after a family quarrel. When Delbert Green arrived, his wife, 18, was in bed with Mrs. James Green, her mother, James Green, Delbert Green's uncle and Mrs. Delbert Green's step-father, was in the kitchen.

Shot Father First. Delbert Green first talked to his wife but she refused a reconciliation, he said, and he then went to the kitchen and shot James Green. He then went into the bedroom and shot each woman once. James Green ran for help, but died in the street a short distance away. Mrs. Hannah Green, 70, mother of James Green, and Lois Green, 16, daughter of James Green, fled from the house but returned for the infant daughter of Delbert Green. Lois Green pleaded with her half-sister's husband before leaving, but he again entered the bedroom and shot both women a second time.

The slayer then drove to his Ogden apartment, using unfrequented roads to avoid officers. Police and sheriff's officers immediately took up the trail but failed to locate the suspect for several hours. He told officers he planned to kill himself, but the gun jammed.

Delbert Green served three months in the state prison in 1928 for assault with intent to commit murder, but was paroled. He was convicted of shooting a cousin of his wife.

STORM HITS AREA NORTH OF G. PASS

Miles of Wire Leveled—Rail and Highway Traffic Interrupted—District Between Glendale, Grants Pass Bears Brunt—Rain Falls in Southern California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 6.—(AP)—King Winter spread his white mantle over the northwest states today as California looked up into clear skies after a general wetting yesterday that extended to southern California for the first time in four months.

Unsettled and colder weather was promised for the northwest for today with a cold wave predicted for the eastern portion Tuesday. More snow was predicted over the mountains of Idaho, Oregon and Washington with the ridge of high pressure extending eastward to Montana.

In southern Oregon a storm of blizzard-like proportions swept over the Cascade mountains and tore down miles of telephone and telegraph wires, interrupted rail and highway traffic and deposited a heavy mantle of snow in the highlands. Reports indicated the district between Glendale and Grants Pass, Ore., received the brunt of the storm. Rain fell in Portland.

Snow in Seattle In Seattle snow started falling late yesterday but ceased late at night after coating the streets with a two-inch blanket. Automobiles had difficulty, but there was no interference with street railway travel.

A trace of snow fell in Tacoma, while communities north and northeast of there reported between three and four inches. Spokane and vicinity received a trace of snow while the mountains eastward received an abundant share.

Telegraphic communication between eastern Canada and Vancouver, B. C., was interrupted by a sheet, snow and rain storm in Fraser valley, east of Vancouver.

Fair Weather South Except in the extreme north portion and in the Sierra Nevada mountains, California was promised generally fair and colder weather. Local frosts in the San Joaquin, Sacramento and Santa Clara valleys were predicted, but it was not believed amiable pots would be necessary to protect orchards. The weather bureau expected unsettled conditions to prevail in extreme northern California and promised more snow for the Sierra Nevada, where temperatures were falling.

Southern California, which received its first wetting in four months, recorded precipitation ranging from one-half to 1.31 inches.

Storm Moves East The rain storm moved eastward during the night, however, and sunny skies were again promised by the weather bureau. The rain extended as far south as the mountain summits west of the Imperial valley, giving San Diego one-half inch of precipitation.

At Truckee, Cal., snow plows were put into use as the blizzard, which deposited more than a foot of snow, continued unabated.

In the Yosemite valley the first snow of the season fell, closing roads but marking the opening of winter sports.

All roads in the vicinity of Tahoe City, Cal., were blocked by the heavy snows. Sixteen inches of snow fell overnight.

Will Rogers Says:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 6.—Another fire in Washington. It just shows you congressmen are not yet competent to carry matches. If all these fires had happened during the previous administration, we could have laid it to the fact they were trying to "smoke" Calvin out. The papers said there was some valuable documents likely to have been lost in the fire. The only thing prevented it, there wasn't any. They were two hours putting it out. A Heflin speech must have caught fire. Yours, WILL ROGERS.
