Ye Smudge Pot (By Arthur Perry)

The population of this burg is 10,847, secured without the aid of a "boom" and not a revolving door in town.

Several of the June brides have chosen their brides.

T. State Johnson is on his way home from the war where he had his fill of Benjamine onions.

Among the turbulent inmates of the Ohio state prison making faces at the warden, is a former resident of Toledo serving 25 years for burglarizing a slot machine.

Our school teacher was absent from work from Friday evening till Sunday morning, returning in a Studebaker sedan, driven by a nice appearing youth.

There is nothing much to fight around here, but dodging mud and civic bankruptcies, via a goat.

THE REPORT-WITHERING (Breckenridge, Tex., Sun)

It is reported around the courthouse that Mr. Clarence Liles, candidate for sheriff, in summing up his qualifications for the office, says if he can't prove that he has already done more real good for the city and county in general and the churches in particular, he will quit the race.

One of the Older Girls is a 32nd cousin of Paul Revere. Several female cut-ups have asked if the British have arrived, and if her horse is well.

A male quartet is being committed. If the new courthouse has steps, they will function first therefrom.

Jimmy Yamashita, a Japanese nipponist, has returned from abroad. Six months ago he was weary of getting up in the morning, before the farmers say they do, and riding a wobbly-wheeled bicycle down to the bank. He did this for a score of years, and never failed to wash the windows once when the water had a chance to form ice on the sidewalk. He could do a mop into a pail of water and cover more floor with one swipe, than the shortstop of the Portland ball team. He reports that the Mikado never heard of the 1928 football team.

Corsey Kidd is bereft of his own mustache, by his own hand. He stood back of this institution for 40 years, except the time the typhoid fever got it.

One of the kents interned in the Ohio prison is a poet. He was a hero in the recent horror, in spite of the fact that his poems were destroyed in the fire.

"OFF YEAR, POLITICALLY" (Hilma Portland Journal.) Why it's "off."

THE LAST CALL FOR MEDFORD

MOST people in Medford are well satisfied with the preliminary census report. They have reason to be. A gain of 88 per cent over 1920 is a fine achievement, and at the present writing, Medford leads the state, in this direction.

But, as we pointed out when the census taking started, what we all want is an accurate count. If there are local residents who have been overlooked, and there seems no doubt there are several—now is the time to gather them in, and the Chamber of Commerce is to be commended for its prompt and efficient attention to this matter.

THE city has until Friday to complete this re-check. This is a big job and a difficult one. The Chamber can't do this alone. Complete success can only be attained by 100 per cent co-operation on the part of the people.

Therefore, we again repeat what we have said several times before. If you are not positive you and every member of your family have been counted, get in touch with the Chamber of Commerce at once, either by telephone, or by filling out and sending in, one of the blanks printed in this paper today.

Do this now. The final census report will fix Medford's place in the population of this country for ten years to come. Let that figure be as accurate as human capabilities can make it.

THE IMPORTANCE OF MEDFORD'S CENSUS

THE importance of the census, from an advertising standpoint, is well illustrated by comments in the two Eugene newspapers yesterday:

The Eugene Guard comments editorially as follows:

Medford's population shows an 88 per cent increase, bidding fair to surpass Eugene's 75 and lead the state. It might be worth noting that in Medford's remarkable growth agriculture, roads and a modern airport have played the leading parts.

The Eugene Register has this to say:

The population of Medford is 10,847. It was 5,766 in 1920. The gain for the ten years is 88 per cent, which is certainly a fine growth in this census year when populations throughout the United States are not expanding as rapidly as in many other census periods.

If you are not as familiar with all of Oregon as you ought to be, you may ask: "What has caused this fine growth in Medford?" Here is the answer, given briefly: "Intelligently directed agriculture."

There has been relatively little industrial expansion in the Rogue River valley during the past decade. One fairly large sawmill has been built in Medford, but that about tells the story so far as industrial payroll development is concerned.

Yet when the census figures are all in, it will be found that Medford has done about as well as any of the cities in Oregon, and BETTER than most.

AGRICULTURE has done it.

Here is something else for you to think about: It is only in recent years, when agriculture in the Rogue River valley has begun to reach really large scale operations, that prosperity has begun to be felt. Last year's crop crop, for example, amounted to nearly FIVE THOUSAND CARLOADS.

That is to say, when the Rogue River valley got away from UNDER PRODUCTION, it started in to prosper.

We need industries and payrolls here in Oregon. No sensible person is going to deny that. But, in our eagerness for industrial development, let us not forget that Oregon's BIG BET is agriculture.

Medford, whose fine growth in the past ten years will not be exceeded by many Oregon cities, is built upon a foundation of agriculture.

Medford's preliminary total is 10,847. If this final drive can increase this total by 153, the final figure will be 11,000.

Here enters an interesting bit of human psychology. Merchants have long recognized that $1.50 represents a far more seductive figure than $2, although the difference is only a paltry two cents. Conversely, a population of 11,000 will loom far larger in the minds of all observers than 10,998, even though the difference is only another paltry two cents.

There is reason to believe an absolutely accurate count would give Medford an increase of 153. Within such a short time, perhaps, this total can't be attained. But under the circumstances it is worth a supreme effort,—with a long pull, a strong pull, and everyone pulling together.

If the drive should fail its maximum goal, conditions would be no worse than they are today. If it should exceed, they would be infinitely better.

A swat in time saves 999,999,999.

One law for the rich and another for the poor isn't so bad. Think of the 2,324,632 for the rest of us.

Americanism: Swallowing food whole in order to save time; spending the time in a sanitarium.

Of course government could operate Muscle Shoals efficiently. It has taken only ten years to decide how to begin.

There's one way to make people law-abiding. Speed limits were raised when everybody decided to go fast.

EXHAUSTION, WEAKNESS AND SICKNESS

There is a strong popular belief, shared and inspired by many physicians and health authorities, that physical exhaustion makes one more susceptible to sickness, especially to respiratory infections. The common respiratory infections, which I designate indiscriminately as "colds," include coryza, tonsillitis, quinsy, acute laryngitis, acute bronchitis, pneumonia, influenza, cerebrospinal meningitis, diphtheria, measles, acute polyomyelitis, scarlet fever, whooping cough, pulmonary tuberculosis, typhoid, and some forms of the world pneumatic plague.

The notion that physical exhaustion predisposes to disease applies to any of these specific diseases mentioned, as well as to other attendant or complicating troubles such as pleurisy, sinusitis, acute mastoiditis, middle ear inflammation, acute multiple arthritis, and the like. All such illnesses are associated in the layman's mind with physical exhaustion. There is a vague idea that one must first be weakened somehow, or one's "resistance" must be lowered, before such illness is likely to occur. Well, there may be a wee small grain of truth in that. If there is, it is so very small that it is scarcely worth worrying about in any circumstances. Of course I don't know whether there is any truth in the notion or not; neither does any other doctor or health authority. So I maintain that until we do know something about this, we do not, and health authorities do not, morally justify in warning or worrying the laity about a hypothetical "lowering of resistance" or in publishing rules for keeping up resistance.

The third-rate advice of the health authorities, in time of flu or pneumonia epidemic, about the importance of "getting plenty of fresh air and good nourishing food" is never taken seriously by anybody anyway. Doesn't every one try to do that all the time, as a matter of instinct?

Some one sends me an imposing placard distributed by the health department of an eastern city. It contains the usual advice for the prevention of what the health officer affably calls "colds" (of course he doesn't believe that they are) and among them I find only one that is worth while. It says "Keep away from persons who have colds, for the germs are carried in the spray given off when such persons cough or sneeze." Very good, so far as it goes. But even if you could duck in time to dodge the spray of cough or sneeze, you'd still be in danger if you remained within five feet of the person with the respiratory infection while he talked with you. This is the most likely way to catch cold, and health authorities do not usually mention this. The majority of cases among nice people. But this health department placard, distributed at popular expense, gives no inkling about it. Don't rush the health authorities. It is only a few years since they discovered that open "face" coughing and sneezing spread disease. Give 'em time. They'll learn about the conversational spray and issue public warnings about it in a few more years. Meanwhile, it's a case of every man for himself, and don't you ask if you are compelled to approach within conversational spray range.

Quill Points

Fame is fleeting and you probably can't remember six celebrities who smoked lucifers last year.

Mr. Coolidge would like to be remembered as an ex-president. His type would feel that way about Teddy.

Encourage the boy to become a plumber instead of a surgeon. It's a much less trouble to go back for his tools.

Some curious people stop to examine a wreck, and others are so busy they wouldn't stop to see one if they made it.

New York has two kinds of speak-easies—those called "night clubs," and those called "spik-easies."

Americanism: Gladfully forcing the rich manufacturer of play pretties to pay all the taxes; wondering why the price of play pretties goes up 10 per cent.

All you need to inspire unselfish devotion to service without thought of money is about a spilloon a year from good bonds.

Maybe the roman senate senators talk that way is because they have developed the habit of appealing to the kind of people that can't read.

If such things can't think, how does a weak tire know when you've got a new spring suit?

One reason why modern youngsters can't find jobs is because so many concerns already have general managers.

Opportunity just seems far away because nobody in your home town is content to knock just once.

Isn't it strange that the only men in America who don't know how to enforce the law should have been selected as officials.
