

LOCAL BROTHERS BUILDING GLIDER FOR EXPERIMENT

Following immediately the news of the record established by Jack Sartow, young first-class glider pilot, who stayed in the air 15 hours and 10 minutes at Point Loma, Cal., comes the story that three Medford chaps are planning to compete with him.

The workers, William Ernest and Hans Meier of Loxley Lane, are building a glider which will rival the eagle in ease of swoop through the atmosphere. They plan to have it completed by the end of this month. It is a primary training glider, built in accordance with plans published in the Glider Magazine. It is 15 feet long and 30 feet wide. The wings with 29 struts will be covered with muslin. One-eighth inch plywood is being used for the construction, which will weigh 120 pounds when completed.

This is the first bird of the air the three Meier boys, who range in age from 15 to 19, have attempted to build. They express no doubts, however, as to the success of the glider. William Ernest, the designer, Ernest calls himself the chief test pilot, and Hans will travel as stowaway, when it takes off on its first journey.

Whether they will swoop down from Table Rock or some other high cliff no one has been able to find out. It is hoped the flight will be made at the time of the airport dedication when the fleet of 75 ships, making the Pacific Northwest tour, arrive at the local field.

EDWIN J. PHILLIPS TAKEN BY DEATH

Edwin J. Phillips passed away at a local hospital late Friday evening at the age of 70 years.

Mr. Phillips was born at Muscatine, Iowa. He had resided in Jackson county for the last 25 years, a part of which time he lived at Prospect, but last resided in the West Side district north of Jacksonville.

He leaves two sisters, Eunice Letner of Iowa and Mrs. J. A. Smithson of San Francisco, who is here for funeral services, which will be held at the Hornbrook cemetery at 1 p. m. Monday. The body will be taken to that place by the G. Ker Funeral parlors.

MR. AND MRS. OLDS VISITING MEDFORD

Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Olds of Sheboygan, Mich., arrived last evening from California, where they have spent several weeks, en route home. They will remain over Sunday.

Mr. Olds still has property interests in the city and says he sees greater improvements here with each succeeding visit. He was pleased to hear of the splendid increase in population in the last 10 years in Medford and all over the county.

Gary Cooper Is Coming to Rialto

"The Virginian" and his Vermont "schoolmarm" are reunited on the all-talking screen in "Only the Brave" which is coming to the Fox Rialto theatre tomorrow.

In this adventure romance of Civil war days, however, their positions are reversed. Gary Cooper, the westernized son of the south in "The Virginian" is seen as the Northern spy behind the Confederate lines, while Mary Brian, the erstwhile Vermont school-teacher, is seen as the belle of old Virginia.

In "Only the Brave" Cooper is again seen as the dashing young man of action to whom danger and love are equally acceptable adventures.

Norma Shearer in Daring Role

Norma Shearer's versatility reaches fresh fields in her new all-talking picture triumph, "The Divorcee," which opens tomorrow at the Fox Crater theatre.

Miss Shearer has experienced another startling metamorphosis in the most daring role of her career.

In this all-plunging into marital discontent, sinking deep into the foundations of that traditional institution, Miss Shearer emerges with new laurels, achieving the finest performance she has ever accomplished in her characterization of the modern wife who fights fire with fire and dares to tell her wayward husband of her triffing.

TABLE ROCK, Ore., May 3.— (Special)—Rains of last week were a wonderful help to growing crops and orchards in this section.

At a school board meeting Monday night, Miss Winnifred May, graduate of Ashland Normal, was signed to teach the lower grades during next school year.

The coming primary election is causing no excitement whatever in these parts, many apparently not realizing such a thing is to be held in the near future.

The center of the stage seems to be held by the Literary Digest prohibition poll and the prospective cheese factory at Central Point.

J. L. Nealon and family visited Mrs. Hazel Atkins and children of Eagle Point Sunday afternoon.

Miss Eva Hart, Book Sage and Robert Hart accompanied by club leader Robert Fowler attended the boys' 4-H club meeting at Sams Valley Tuesday evening.

Miss Betty Terry of Oak Grove was a week-end guest at the Schaefer home last week.

At the last meeting of the community club a movement was launched for the improving of the main highway. Lane treaty marker erected two years ago near the Hardman place.

Mrs. Blanch Gregory and children and Ruth Collins drove to Bandon last week and returned with many of the beautiful rhododendrons that grow in that region.

Miss Ruth Sage was one of the children born in 1918 and entitled to an Eastman kodak, which was presented to her Thursday by the Sween novelty store of Medford.

The redwood pipe for the new pipe line to the Bedskin orchard has arrived and is being placed in position by E. C. Hamilton's ditch crew.

From present indications there will be a heavy pear crop in this section and probably a lot of thinning will be necessary.

George Wright has turned the milk route over to Albert Strauss of Sams Valley, who took Charge May 1, equipped with a new truck.

S. F. Newman is putting on the moth spray for the small orchards in this district this week.

At the regular meeting of the Sams Valley Grange tonight the first and second degrees will be conferred on four candidates.

Murder at High Tide

CHARLES G. BOOTH

SYNOPSIS: An atmosphere of "tragedy" is sensed by Allan Hunt, young Figue deaire, the moment he arrives at San Parados, secluded estate on San Lucas Island. He notes that Parados, whose art collection Hunt is to appraise, terrifies his servants. Hunt is baffled when Parados himself, reputedly wicked man of wealth and taste, becomes mysteriously frightened upon finding a certain glass case empty. Parados, saying he won't be at dinner, sends Hunt to his room. From his window Hunt sees a girl prancing outside a room where the art is kept. Following her, he intercepts her as she cuts the canvas from the portrait of an elderly woman whom the girl resembles. Hunt is smitten by the girl's beauty. A door unexpectedly opens and the voice of a man calls.

"Unfortunately, I had no legal title in my own name—and the administrator insisted! It belonged to the Brent collection. I never dreamed Parados would not let me have it."

"I saw him in San Francisco. He wouldn't let me have the portrait at any figure. Oh, he was nasty! But I didn't give up hope, so I came here this afternoon. I caught his launch as it was leaving La Playa and bribed the boatman to bring me. I—saw Parados at this afternoon."

Caroline dropped her eyes.

"Mademoiselle will finish," Figue murmured.

"There isn't much more," Caroline said wearily. "Oh, you cannot understand! I rushed out wretched and furious and began to walk blindly up the slope and cried. The boatman went down and I remembered the boatman had promised to take me back. I hurried down, but he had gone. The idea of—of taking the picture came to me. I couldn't fight it down. I'm not sorry and I don't care what Parados does to me!"

Caroline covered her face, but Figue gently removed her hands.

"Those blue eyes are too pretty for tears, mademoiselle," he said. "Come, now! You will put your

CHAPTER 3

MADEMOISELLE EXPLAINS

A LITTLE egg-shaped man with a bald pink head was coming toward us from the library door. He had an abundant blond mustache, and his sparkling china-blue eyes imparted a vivacious air to his physical attributes. Parados, I recalled, had mentioned a M. Figue. "No harm has been done to the picture," I said hastily.

"No harm was intended it, the little man said sternly. "Mademoiselle will explain, yes?"

It was clear that Mademoiselle

"The portrait happens to be mine," the girl said.

was unequal to explain anything then.

"I'm sure it's not as bad as it looks," I said.

"Monsieur is generous," the little man chuckled. "It is not possible you are that M. Morrison of whom M. Parados informed me, no?"

"I am Allan Hunt, the junior partner," I told him curtly. "Morrison is ill."

"I am astonished!" he exclaimed. "But come! Mademoiselle will explain."

"I was going to take the portrait, of course," the girl said quietly. "You might as well tell Mr. Parados."

"M. Parados—um," the little man muttered. "The Gen. Lane treaty marker erected two years ago near the Hardman place."

Mrs. Blanch Gregory and children and Ruth Collins drove to Bandon last week and returned with many of the beautiful rhododendrons that grow in that region.

IMPOVERISHED LADY DIES IN CLIFF FALL

BRIGHTON, England, May 3.—(AP)—Mystery surrounding the discovery of a woman's body at the foot of Black Rock cliffs here Thursday evening was cleared up today with identification of the dead woman as Lady Haldon, wife of Lord Haldon, former army captain and veteran of the World war.

Lord and Lady Haldon had been living recently in one-room quarters in Brighton, one of the crowded sections in southwestern London, where they had dropped the use of their titles and were known simply as "Mr. and Mrs. Haldon."

LOCAL PLAYERS DRAW APPLAUSE IN 'HELLO THERE'

(By Eva Nealon)

One hundred and fifty people wove into one colorful pattern of entertainment with sufficient flaws in the tapestry to sustain the "old home town appeal"—such was the presentation of "Hello There" at the Medford armory last night. The musical comedy, written and directed by Miss Rosella Zura, was given under the auspices of the Grater Medford club. There were so many people at it, ranging in ages from pre-school children to adults, that there were few people in the audience who did not recognize a friend in one or another.

The arrangement of the stage, which was converted into a colorful garden, and the lovely costumes, worn by all choruses, added much to the success of the production. Special credit is due Miss Zura for the stage arrangement and the masterful way in which she handled the large group of amateurs, weaving them into a coherent plot.

Joe Hillis as Father Wabber, whose son and daughter (Arthur Hardy and Laura Drury), take it upon themselves to make him the goat of a complex plot in order to promote their own marriage plans, made the most of the humorous lines contained in the comedy and was rewarded by many jovial outbursts from the audience.

His wife (Mrs. Newcomb) was equally adept at interpreting her lines. Parson Smythe (Nathan Newcomb) assumed a face sufficiently sanctimonious to please the chaperon (Mrs. Maud Harris), who looked far more like a coed and acted the same, according to the group of dashing girls, who composed the college chorus. Billy O'Donnely (Richard Appleton) and Grace Loveland (Eleanor Curry), who also figured in the love plot, added humor as well as several appealing song numbers to the comedy.

Bridget Fitzpatrick, whose standards of living were constantly lowered by the odor of onions, was well portrayed by Mrs. Dyanan. She came out of the kitchen long enough to win the heart of the stable boy, Jimmie Hughes (Victor Dallaire) and to entertain the audience with an Irish jig.

Miss Matilda (Mrs. Rose Scheffelin) and Peggy (Maurine McClure) made crying as entertaining as laughter, judging from the responses of the audience. This was well overbalanced by that of the smitten college professor, who was none other than Roland Humphreys.

One of the most delightful elements of the entertainment was the chorus of Baby Dolls and Kewpies who sang "How Would You Like to Be a Kid Again" as a prologue to the show. Several dancing specialties were offered by pupils of Mrs. Katherine Stang.

Country bumpkins, old fashioned girls, Japanese girls and military cadets were among the other popular choruses included. A specialty dance by Anna Mae Pison was greeted with great applause. Music was furnished by the Syncopating Sisters, before the show and between acts. Mrs. Anderson was pianist for the evening.

In Washington 75 per cent of the clip had been handled, they said, and Washington growers have been signed by co-operatives as well as growers in eastern Oregon.
