Placing Road Signs

John Henney, in charge of the road sign department of the Oregon State Motor association, is spending a short time in Medford and Jackson county, placing 230 or so road signs on country roads, giving the distances to the nearest towns. Mr. Henney expects to mark all roads in the county in keeping with a road marking campaign carried on by the association.

Census Conference Held

Lee Meyer, field agent connected with the census headquarters at Eugene, spent yesterday afternoon with C. T. Baker of the Medford Chamber of Commerce, conferring in connection with the additional names sent to Eugene last week to bolster up Medford's population to the 11,000 mark. Mr. Meyer failed to make any official statement in regard to Medford's figure, but it is thought that the population is well over the mark.

Mutual Surprise

"It's a small world, after all," said J. E. Driver of Santa Barbara, to his brother, E. R. Driver of Central Point, as they met in a service station in Merced, recently. The two brothers, with their wives, had intended to meet at the Ahwanee hotel to spend a few days enjoying the high waterfalls and wild flowers, but were mutually surprised to see each other as they drove into the station for gas before going into the valley.

Klamath Falls Growing

The big growth in population by Klamath Falls is gratifying to R. F. Kenwood, who was in Medford today from that city. He attributes the surprising increase to the lumber industry which has caused the construction of several large mills in the Klamath section. The city is also in the center of a big agricultural country and has much to which to look forward in the future, although the lumber industry in time may fall as the sustaining industry.

Speaks at Ashland

Emphasizing the four major factors upon which the recent Crescent City harbor hearing centered, A. H. Banwell, manager of the Northern California-Southern Oregon Development association, spoke today before Ashland Rotarians. Needs of present and prospective commerce, recent railroad and highway development, existing freight rates and general economic benefits to result from the reductions thereon, and benefits to accrue to the federal government, were the four points emphasized—Ashland Tidings.

THE HOME OF BREAD LIKE MOTHER MADE

Contradicting Proverbs

(With apologies to Ripley)
"You Can't Have Your Cake and Eat It, Too"
"You're "Saving Without Self Denial"

Yes, you can have your cake and eat it too—if you will shop the Groceteria way— You can buy as you have always bought—live as you have always lived — set the same table—eat the same foods—and save.

Cutting out the cost of clerks—credits and small deliveries makes a lot of difference in store expense—expense that does not enter into the eating of the so-called cake.

So follow the crowds—shop the Groceteria way—it's a lot handier now with our second store at 6th and Grape. The same foods—the brands you know— are at both stores—and there's always room to park. Satisfy yourself that you can "have your cake and eat it too" by "Saving Without Self Denial."
