GOODYEAR DEALERS OF SOUTHERN OREGON GET HINTS FOR EFFICIENCY

Southern Oregon dealers for Goodyear tires gathered at the Hotel Medford last night and enjoyed an interesting talk on the construction and proper use of Goodyear truck tires, by A. N. Day, head of the truck tire department of the Goodyear Rubber company's Los Angeles plant. Mr. Day had a real message for the dealers in this section of Oregon, who learned much of the manufacturing process employed in the production of Goodyear transportation tires.

"There are scores of different uses for truck tires and many different conditions which have bearing on the selection of tires," Mr. Day said. "The Goodyear company meets every requirement of truck owners with a tire to fit every purpose. Scores of different types and sizes of tires are manufactured by Goodyear so that each truck owner may have a tire especially adapted to his particular needs."

Mr. Day explained in detail to the dealers just how to determine the size and type of the best fitted to the customer's requirements.

Apples and pears in the Yakima district of Washington were damaged to the extent of 10 per cent by frost on the night of May 10, Floyd Young, government frost expert, was informed here this forenoon. Conditions were favorable for a similar frost in the Rogue River valley that night, he said, but the arrival of clouds made it unnecessary for local orchardists to smudge.

While a big share of the frost danger is over for the season there is still sufficient danger to keep orchardists awake at night when cold weather threatens, Mr. Young says. Last year oil was burned until May 28.

Local fruit has suffered no commercial damage from frost so far with the exception of D'Anjou pears, which sustained bad markings on the night of April 9 from frost, and it is said they are the worst seen here for six or seven years.
