

CAMERAGRAMS

PERFECT—Leading fashion experts of Paris and New York chose Miss Jean Drummond, above, as the most beautiful and perfect model in America. She is blond and only 17.

FIESTA QUEEN—The honor of presiding over the Santa Clara Fiesta of Roses at Santa Clara, Calif., fell to pretty Miss Louise Smith, above, of Campbell, Calif., who was elected queen for the occasion.

IT SEEMS TO BE A MINOR MATTER, but you may well ask, "What's this generation coming to?"—Here is Billy Raymond, left, of Los Angeles, showing his dog, "Tito," how to get 45 miles an hour on the family car, while two fellow townsmen, center, up and get married. The happy couple, Dick Fraser, 4, and Beverly Weder, 2, seem glad the ceremony is over even though they were only doing their part in a mock wedding at a children's festival. As determined a looking bawl player you'll find hereabouts is husky Bobby Neyland, upper right, six-months-old son of Bob Neyland, coach of the University of Tennessee football team. And just below is cute little Harriet Sommers, happy, because she won first prize at a horse show held recently at Washington, D. C.

EVEN THOUGH HELEN KANE, above, did start the vogue for boop-boop-a-doop singing, you can't be angry with her so long as she looks as wistful as this. You have probably heard baby-voiced Helen on the stage, or in the talkies, or over the radio.

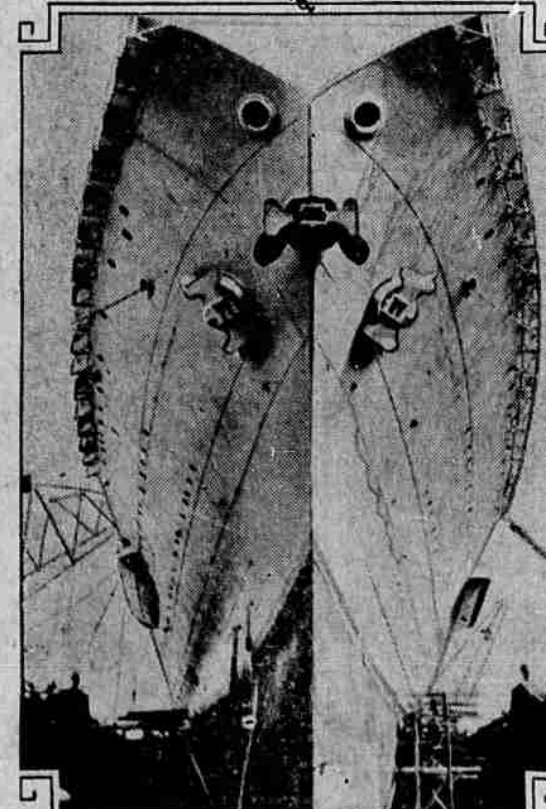

A TOWER BITES THE DUST—The three stages in the demolition of the water tower of the old Del Prado hotel in Chicago are graphically shown above. The tower was demolished to make room for the new $1,000,000 International House to be built on the campus of the University of Chicago for its foreign students.

LOOK A-WEIGH!—Just to be sure that she keeps in trim, this shapely chorus girl, like 2000 other Fanchon and Marco dancers, must follow a prescribed diet and then see what the scales say each week.

NOT IN THE TALKIES, BUT IN THE ROCKIES are these charming mountain nymphs who thought they'd take a peak at the Park of the Red Rocks at Denver before it was officially opened for the summer. They are shown here among the rocks and rills, executing a graceful turn which it would be worth climbing the highest mountain to see.

CARRIER BACK IN OLD VIRGINNY—Here is a striking photo of the airplane carrier U. S. S. Saratoga as she entered the dry dock at Norfolk, Va., recently, for a 30-day shampoo and inspection. Notice the facial expression—the anticipatory look in those eyes.

ON THE FACE OF THINGS you'd think that this hand-carved "devil mask" would be just the thing to wear at a masquerade. But—and here's the rub—it is covered with lacquered human skin. Anyway, this African relic was eagerly sought by collectors from all over Europe when it was offered for sale recently in London.

"OUT WHERE THE WEST REMAINS" is what they call Pawnee Bill's Old Town which was recently opened near Pawnee, Okla. Built on a buffalo ranch bounded on all sides by tepees, wigwams, lodges and bark houses of various Indian tribes, Old Town contains among its buildings an Indian trading post, an Indian council house, and a Hopi house. Arriving for the ceremonies on the stagecoach are, left to right, Major Lillie, Governor W. J. Holloway, of Oklahoma, and General W. H. Sears, one of the few living generals who fought in an Indian battle.
