Murder at High Tide

SYNOPSIS: One by one Anatole Fligue pieces together clues to the murder of Dan Parados, who was shot to death with a bullet in the hand. Manning, the deputy attorney, is lost in a maze of evidence, but Fligue sorts through his own account. Manning, a mild, unworldly fellow, reveals that Mrs. Parados was absent from her room for a few minutes about the time her husband was killed. She mentions finding a green stone in Mrs. Parados' room. It belongs to a cheap vendor in the housekeeper's found. Quizzing Mrs. Parados, Fligue discloses that one stone of the pendant is missing. He charges that the pendant is hers.

Chapter 31 A SERPENT IN THE HAND

WE had two seconds of silence before Mrs. Parados sprang to her feet.

"That is a wicked lie!" she exclaimed.

But the vehemence of her tone defeated its purpose. It left me with the conviction that she and not Fligue had uttered the lie.

Fligue bowed. "Madame is emphatic, but I repeat: this pendant is hers."

"How dare you say such a thing! Are you accusing me of murder? Look at it. Mrs. Parados pointed a quivering finger at the pendant.

"What was the price tag on it—35 cents? Do you mean to say that a woman in my position would own such a thing?"

She turned on Samuels, her voice unpleasantly shrill.

"Who is in charge of this investigation? You or Fligue?"

Fligue's accusation had thrown Samuels off his balance.

"We shall hear what M. Fligue has to say, Mrs. Parados," he said. "You'd better sit down."

"It is a long story," Fligue began cautiously, "and there are many blanks—"

"You are telling it!" Mrs. Parados said passionately.

"Mais oui. But madame will help." Fligue's eyes were so supremely wise. "You have told us that it was monsieur's delight to how you say—humiliate you. There were other women, perhaps?"

"Yes." "And so, madame, your affection for monsieur became hatred?"

"Could it have become anything else? I've told you this before. He wanted fear and hatred—and that was all. I did not give him fear, but I did hate him—with every fiber of my body. Didn't he ever bad? Didn't he offer me every conceivable insult that entered his head? I hated him enough to kill him, but I didn't kill him. Remember that!"

"Madame was too wise, perhaps?"

"Perhaps." Fligue twirled his mustache. "And so madame conceived l'idee magnifique of her revenge?"

Mrs. Parados clenched her hands. "I don't know what you mean."

Fligue leaned forward, wagging a plump finger.

"Madame will remember those little ones, le Balafre and Cleéron Bec, who escaped from l'île du Diable seven months ago? The journals everywhere were full of it."

"Yes. Why?"

"Madame," Fligue continued gently, "it was a month after that escape that the notices about the jade phoenix of M. Parados began to appear in the Marseilles journals."

"The little muscles at the corners of Mrs. Parados' mouth began to quiver."

"I don't know what you mean," Mrs. Parados whispered.

"Have the perceptions of madame lost their subtlety?" Fligue inquired, spreading his hands. "I speak of madame's discovery... that monsieur was the famous Jules Lacôte... the accomplice of le Balafre and Cleéron Bec... whom he betrayed. Madame will remember that when those little ones robbed the Banque du Midi, a patron of the bank was shot. And who was that patron but the merchant of antiques from whom the infamous Lacôte had bought his lucky piece, that jade phoenix, the day before?"

"Ah, but madame was clever! Too clever to kill monsieur, whom she hated. Now, now, she will have Messieurs le Balafre and Bec, who have just come out of the black horror of that île du Diable, attend to that little matter. And go madame puts her notices in the Marseilles journals. Does she not know that those wretched ones will be hungry for news of the city of their birth? It was an astonishing cleverness, that revenge! Madame has the genius." Fligue bowed ironically.

A drop of blood trembled upon Mrs. Parados' lower lip. She shut her eyes and clenched her hands, then suddenly flung her head up and broke into a torrent of words. "Yes, I did insert that advertise-

Contagious Foot Disease Attacks Millions---Watch Out

You May Have It is often an oozing of liquid. If not caught in time the disease usually spreads along the sole and sides of the foot—the skin reddens and may peel off.

CAUTION: The disease is infectious—someone in your home may have it—(find out at night). Beware of bathmats, either at home or in hotels—use a newspaper—it's safer. Wear your slippers and walk as little as possible in your bare feet.

TREATMENT: After bathing the feet apply Moore's Emerald Ointment, not only under and between the toes but over the bottom and sides of feet. This powerful oil soothes and penetrates—stops the itching and checks the growth of the germs.

Pharmacists everywhere carry American Dispense Moore's Emerald Ointment—a bottle lasts a long time.

DRUGGIST TELLS HOW HE CURED HIMSELF OF PILES

Suffered Years. He Tried Everything, but Found No Relief

A CLERK TOLD HIM REMEDY WIFE USED

"I know many pile sufferers will doubt me when I say their troubles from piles and hemorrhoids can now be banished—I don't blame them because I suffered twelve years and during that time tried everything carried in a drug store for such troubles with only partial or temporary relief," declares Robert Higgins, Ph. C.

"I'm a druggist myself and when I say this new internal way of getting rid completely of pile troubles is best—I know whereof I speak. One of the clerks in the store told me how wonderfully these new Colac Pile Pills had helped his wife, so I took a bottle home because I was suffering terribly at that time and I want to say they worked like magic. I never dreamed a pill you swallow at meal times could so quickly banish all the pain, discomfort and symptoms. Colac Pile Pills are the best remedy for this painful affliction I ever heard of and I recommend them to customers," continued Dr. Higgins, a well known druggist of Cornith, N. Y.

Thousands of people—even cases of long standing—terrible cases bedridden—have been quickly rid of their troubles. Anyone may get the same satisfactory and blessed relief, yet many hesitate—some druggists hesitate to get a stock—everything carried in a drug store is so hard to believe such troubles can be banished so easily, without expense or loss of time from work. Just imagine being free of pain, comfortable either working, sitting, walking or sleeping once more. Colac Pile Pills are backed up by guarantee of results or money back, by nationally known Colac Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., who will mail full size bottles, postage paid in plain wrapper, on receipt of 75c in stamps or coin, if your druggist hasn't obtained them yet.

MONTANA PICNIC PROVES SUCCESS

EDEN PRECINCT, Ore., June 5.—(Sp.)—The big Montana picnic held at Ever-shady auto park near Phoenix was a most enjoyable gathering. The rain did not interfere with the succeeding of the long tables, which were laden with the many good things of the farms and orchards of the valley. There were members present from Klamath Falls, Grants Pass, Burns, Falls and as far away as Roseburg. J. H. Masson donated the picnic grounds and stoves for warmth and making hot coffee.

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 5.—(Sp.)—John Birch, a Russian veteran of the Crimean war, observed his birthday by doing light chores around the farm on which he lives with his two sons.
