SAINTLY—Wearing this costume, an exact reproduction of that worn by Joan of Arc in her victorious ride from Orleans to Compiegne, Mlle. Nelly Widhelm, above, personified the Maid of Orleans during a recent three-day celebration at Compiegne, commemorating the 500th anniversary of the famous ride.

WHO SAID "WEAKER SEX?" Imagine his embarrassment, whoever said it, on viewing these photos, taken here and abroad. For example, there is Helen Patch, upper left, making hoop-ee in preparation for the National A. A. U. Gymnastic championships at Los Angeles. She is depicted in a spectacular bull's-eye nose dive through the hoop. Just below her is an exciting scene in a ball game at Stamford Bridge, England, between members of the "Rio Rita" and "Heads Up" musical comedy companies. Edith Day, captain of the former, is shown poling out a long hit. Miss Frances Morton, of Norfolk, Va., who believes the place for the woman is in the team, is pictured below, fighting for every inch in the running broad jump event at the athletic meet at Smith College, Northampton, Mass. And at the right, leaping for the ball in a lacrosse game at Smith College, are Betty Beale, left, of Washington, D. C., and Helen Bragdon, of Cincinnati, O.

"DROP IN SOME TIME"—That's the greeting friends extend to Bert White, above, noted parachute jumper of Los Angeles. Bert is pictured here coming to a beautiful landing, chute outspread, after a practice leap in his attempt to set a world's altitude record for parachute jumps.

BIG GIRL NOW—You'd never guess this to be Mary Kornman, famous child film star who played in "Our Gang" comedies. Mary is shown here as she appeared at a Los Angeles court recently to have a movie contract ratified.

LOTS OF IVORY in his head, but this elephant's not so dumb. Philphuss, veteran of the circus and movies, is shown here accepting an orange, skin and all, from Miss Jean Hart at the California Valencia Orange Show preliminaries at Anaheim, Cal. Not so tusk for Phil.

HOW TO BEAR IT AND GRIN—Little Mary Jeanne Haglund says she is not a bit frightened even if she is feeding a bottle of milk to a bear because he's so cute and cunning. Mary, who lives at Morris, Ill., was a fascinated visitor at the Outdoor Life Exposition held recently at Chicago.

AND A MARITIME WAS HAD BY ALL—When the industrial and financial leaders of the country met at Los Angeles recently for the 17th National Foreign Trade Convention, they had many a word about building up a strong maritime trade. Among the many exhibits of America's foreign commerce was the one shown above, with Miss Georgia Dunlop in charge, depicting the growth of the steel industry.

TURF FOLLOWER—Plenty enthusiastic about horses is cute Rosa Wainwright, above, five, who is shown here at the National Capital Horse Show at Bradley Farms, Md. She is the daughter of Captain and Mrs. D. S. Wainwright, U. S. N.

ALLEZ-OOP, HEAVE! Sure to break the grocer's scales is this steel skeleton, weighing something over 50 tons. This frame, shown being lifted into place, is to be part of the stationary element for a big hydro-electric generating unit which will produce 57,000 horsepower of energy at a New York generating station.
