

MELLON IS FRIEND OF TARIFF ACT

Senator Smoot Claims Treasurer Favorably Disposed Toward Pending Measure — La Follette Flays Bill As Betrayal.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—(AP)—In Senator Smoot's judgment, Secretary Mellon is "for the tariff bill."

The veteran Utah legislator so expressed himself today in the senate. The question of the treasury secretary's attitude has been challenging legislative and political interest of late.

While he had not talked with Mr. Mellon, Smoot told Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, the "secretary denies the stories in the press" that he looks with disfavor on the pending measure.

He said he did not know how Senators Reed or Grundy of Pennsylvania would vote, but asserted, "I'm just as sure as I live that a majority of the senate wants to pass the bill."

The view of Smoot, who is chairman of the finance committee, held attention after Senator LaFollette, Republican, independent, Wisconsin, had flayed the measure with a vigor reminiscent of his famous father. He said it represented a betrayal of President Hoover's pledge of a limited revision "to give agriculture equality with industry."

Burdens Farmers. LaFollette declared it "places new burdens upon the farmers which increase the disparity against him, deny him relief and leave him without hope of sharing in any substantial benefits of the protective system."

He charged the measure goes far beyond the Payne-Aldrich act of 1890 and that the "same substance" to which the authors of that bill resorted to conceal what they did is being adopted here today to force this fraud down the throats of the American people.

"The rates in this bill have been dictated by the same interests that wrote the schedules of the Payne-Aldrich act. It is defended today by the surviving members of the same group of party leaders."

"The Republican party lost the house in 1910, lost every state in the union save Utah and Vermont in 1912 and did not regain control of the presidency and of congress until 12 years after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich act."

believed to be dying in hospitals here.

Survivors to Boston
They and the other survivors were brought to Boston today by the Gloucester, another Merchant and Miners liner.

The Fairfax, a Merchants and Miners Transportation company ship, bound out of Boston for Norfolk, Va., with a passenger list of 71 and a crew of 70, drove her bow into the port side of the tanker. Watchmen aboard the steamship could do little more than shout a warning.

Before the ships broke apart the tanker, loaded with oil, burst into flames. Blazing oil poured out on the surface of the sea and, swept by the waves, enveloped the fore part of the Fairfax.

The tanker sank within 20 minutes, carrying with her her entire crew.

Several were seen to jump overboard as the flames swept upward and it is believed all of the missing perished in the sea of blazing oil.

leaving a flaming sheet of oil on the surface of the sea. Apparently in panic and crazed by their burns, several persons leaped into the blazing sea. Among the seven passengers who were missing four were women. Eleven members of the crew disappeared.

Lost in Fog
There was no opportunity to render aid either to those who jumped overboard or to those aboard the wrecked tanker. The flames and the fog swept them from sight.

Passengers aboard the Fairfax were in confusion but order was restored within a short time and, according to officers of the ship, all further danger had passed within 30 minutes of the collision.

BOSTON, Mass., June 11.—(AP)—The women, "God bless 'em," acted like majors, A. E. Abbott of Quincy, bronzed first sergeant of marines, said in describing a four-hour battle against fire and deadly smoke, as flames blanketed the Fairfax almost instantly after the collision.

"With a terrible death staring them in the face," he said, "they assembled, gasping for breath, in the stern of the boat while the apparently impossible task of saving the boat was undertaken by all on board."

"Huddled in a group with unconscious forms all about them, they refused to become panic-stricken and thus allowed all the men to work in putting out the fire."

Sergeant Abbott praised also the spirit of the men passengers. After the first shock of the blast they set to work, manned hoses and made no effort to get to lifeboats until the Gloucester was ready to make the transfer, he said.

Marines Save Ship
Taking no credit for himself, Sergeant Abbott told of the heroic efforts of four other marines and six navy officers who, he said, "really saved the ship. But for the efforts of these men the Fairfax would have been lost and all aboard burned to death or drowned."

The battle against the flames, he said, lasted for four hours. The whole port side was enveloped in an instant. All the passengers on that side of the boat rushed to starboard to escape the fire and smoke. The service men segregated the women and children and directed the work of fighting the fire.

After the Gloucester had arrived here and its weary cargo had gone to hotels, Sergeant Abbott went in search of his fellow marines to be sure they were made comfortable.

on their faces, visited drug stores, paint shops and speakeries, purchasing samples of "smoke," so-called because of its clouded, milky white appearance, and arresting dispensers.

The raiders said they found scores of patrons of the Bowery drinking dives lying in drunken stupor in the sawdust which covered the floors.

Anti-Freeze Sold
Major Campbell said that analysis showed some of the seized liquor to be denatured alcohol of the kind used as anti-freeze mixture in automobile radiators. Other samples proved to be pure synthetic wood alcohol, which he said has no distasteful odor and is not readily identified.

In a point store the raiders purchased a half-pint bottle labeled "Denatured Alcohol—Poison," for 25 cents. The proprietor and his wife were arrested.

United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle said that the cases against those arrested on the "smoke" shop raids would be given preference and would be taken directly to the federal grand jury.

COURT CONFERS UPON PLAN FOR NEW STRUCTURE

Architects Gain Ideas for Blue Prints—Construction Probably Start Within Twelve Months.

The county court is conferring with architects and considering plans for the new $265,000 court house to be built by Jackson county, as approved by the voters at the May primary when, also, the Washington school site was selected. No definite action will be forthcoming for some time, as the court is now "just brooding around."

Five architects have announced their intentions of submitting drawings, including Frank C. Clark, local architect. The architects confer with the court and embody that body's ideas in their plans. This procedure involves a vast amount of work and study. From the submitted drawings, the county court will eventually make a final selection.

The court is also studying court houses of the state and endeavoring to profit by their mistakes. It is also planned to have the court house possess architectural beauty, along with perfect detail and arrangement.

At the present rate of speed, it will be next year at this time ere construction is underway, if then. The next move is up to the school board, who must take action to clear the Washington school site and make provisions to house the children properly. They are expected to take some action late this summer.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE OPEN IN NEW EDIFICE

Forty-Four Story Building Houses 'Year Round Market For Products of Man and Soil.'

CHICAGO, June 11.—(AP)—The Chicago board of trade opened Tuesday for the first full session in its new 44-story home in La Salle street, was described by its president, John A. Bunnell, last night as "a year round steady market for the products of the soil and of man, guaranteeing to everyone fair treatment and honest dealing."

The opening ceremonies of the $22,000,000 home of the greatest grain marketing center in the world wound up with a banquet addressed by President Bunnell and Silas H. Strawn, diplomat and civic leader.

"The problems of marketing cannot be solved by the stroke of a pen," President Bunnell said. "The law of supply and demand is still working, and is always bound in the end to rule."

Tracing the 82-year history of the board, he said the grain merchants had tried to establish a central market where farmers could get fair prices, with the merchants profiting as the benefited farmers traded in the city.

REWARDS GROW FOR MURDERER OF JOURNALIST

CHICAGO, June 11.—(AP)—With rewards aggregating $55,000 offered for the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred J. Lingie, newspaper reporter, city and county authorities continued their drive against the gangsters today.

The Chicago Herald-Examiner duplicated the Tribune's $25,000 reward offer and the Chicago Evening Post posted an additional $3000.

Authorities had information today to confirm their belief Lingie had been marked for death. Attorney Louis P. Piquett, a former prosecutor, said he met the reporter on Randolph street Sunday, the day before the slaying.

Lingie was telling me his theory of the Eugene McLaughlin slaying," Piquett said, "when a blue sedan drew up to the curb and stopped. Two men in it looked at Lingie, and he at them. He stopped suddenly, in the middle of a sentence, said 'goodby' and hurried into a store."

A NICE GIRL COMES TO TOWN

HER NAME was Mary Lou and she wanted to be more than "just nice." She yearned, too, for excitement, romance and the attentions of men.

She overheard her escort's condescending remark that she—whom he had so urgently invited to spend a two weeks' holiday in London—was nice enough. "Too darned nice, if you know what I mean."

"But I don't want to be nice and modest, that doesn't get you anywhere. I've learned that tonight. I want to be like all other girls," she declared.

Whereupon her adventures began. The story is told in this delightful new serial by Maysie Greig.
