Big Rain of 1888

Mrs. O. C. Purkeypile recalls more than an "ordinary" rain on the day she landed in Central Point on the evening train from the south. June 29, 1888. A very heavy downpour encountered in northern California extended over the mountains and Rogue River valley, and continued raining most of the time until the fourth of July. That year it frequently rained all during the month of August.—(Central Point American).

FROST NO TERROR THIS SPRINGTIME

The 1930 frost season for the Rogue River valley, which was one of the most fortunate in local history in the way of causing so little damage to fruit and so few frosts is at an end, unless there should come a miraculous change in the weather. The special weather apparatus used by Floyd Young, head of the government frosts, is at an end, unless there ment, and his assistant, Roy Rogers, was all dismantled early last week.

Mr. Young left two weeks ago to inspect the frost stations and crops in the Washington fruit districts, and from there to go to his home and headquarters at Pomona, Calif., leaving Mr. Rogers to handle the situation here the remainder of the season. Mr. Rogers left the middle of last week for Charles City, Iowa, to take the place of the weather bureau head there while the latter is on his annual vacation, and will be engaged in such relief work the remainder of the summer in various parts of the country.

NEW LODGE ELKS FOR GRANTS PASS

Quite a delegation of Medford Elks are planning to take part in the ceremonies of establishing a new Elks lodge at Grants Pass next Tuesday evening when a special program is being arranged in that city.

A big banquet will be served at 6:30, followed by initiation of members. The Grants Pass members formerly belonged to the local lodge, but sufficient strength has been shown for the establishment of a lodge in the "Climate City," aside from Medford. A temporary organization has already been effected.

VETERAN STATE ALIENIST DEAD

SALLEM, Ore., June 14—(AP)—Dr. L. F. Griffith, 62, assistant superintendent of Oregon state hospital and a prominent alienist, died here today after an illness of several months.

Dr. Griffith had been associated with the state hospital for 39 years. He was born near Salem in 1868 and graduated from Willamette university. He then went to the University of Tennessee where he graduated in medicine. He returned to Salem soon after his graduation and has made his home here ever since.
