SCIENCE EXPLAINS MIND CLOCKWORK

WASHINGTON, June 21—(AP)—When a person goes to bed with his mind fixed on getting up at a certain time the next morning he often awakens at that time without the aid of an alarm clock.

This is one of the mysteries of sleep explained by Dr. Otto Krauderer, Austrian psychiatrist.

When sleep comes, Dr. Krauderer says, the sleeper is divided into three or four persons.

There is the waking ego, the dream ego, and the sleep ego. The latter is unconscious. The second is semi-conscious with a sort of uncontrolled contact with the outside world which results in weird images, lovely dreams and horrible nightmares.

But the first like a sentry, stays awake and keeps watch.

It challenges all stimuli coming to the brain and if any of them look suspicious it warns the dreamer and awakens the sleeper whereupon all three become one person again, ready to fight or run.

Before splitting up for the night, Dr. Krauderer says, the whole personality, acting as camp commander, gives the sentries their special orders. Such would be the order to awaken the others at a certain time.

Will Rogers Here in Fox Talkie

Will Rogers and Lumsden Hare in a scene from the Fox Movietone production, "So This Is London."

"We are all brothers under the skin," briefly expresses the theme of Will Rogers' second starring picture for Fox Movietone, "So This Is London," which opens a four day run at the Fox Craterian theater today.

Based on the George M. Cohan stage success of a decade ago it shows the Oklahoma wit and philosopher in the role of a Texan cotton mill owner, a man prejudiced against the English, mostly because they were not American.

Eventually business calls him to England, his son falls in love with an English girl and in trying to straighten out the trouble, Rogers arrives at a mutual understanding with his English friends and finds they are fine people after all.

King of the Assassins

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—One of the richest men of Europe is an Assassin.

Not only is he an Assassin but the leader of the Assassins—a million of them.

But the Assassins with a capital A have nothing to do with assassination, at least, not now.

As a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its Washington, D. C. headquarters, that gathers up the threads of one of the strangest stories that geography has to tell.

Bathub and Fortress Play Parts

"The story of the Assassin embraces three continents, Asia, Africa and Europe; it spreads over nearly 10 centuries; it is punctuated with such names as Marco Polo, Edward I of England, Genghis, Sultan Sanjar of Khorsan, the King of Jerusalem, Fatima, daughter of Mohammed, the Aga Khan, Mademoiselle Andree Carron, Edward VII of England, and the $85,000 colt 'Hurrie On.'"

"To unravel this three-hundred-thousand-and-one Arabian Nights romance one can begin with a bathub in a French chateau near Chambrey or travel back nearly 1,000 years to the unscalable fortress of Alamut high in the Elfbuz mountains overlooking the Plain of Teheran.

The Mountain's power over his fidsals. In Alamut, this master criminal caused to be made a beautiful, secret garden crowded with roses and other flowers, trees bearing peaches and plums, and vines with luscious grapes. Fountains tossed their spray into mirror pools bordered by gay pavilions. This exquisite garden he peopled with lovely women.

In the arid mountains of Persia he created a paradise to serve his evil designs.

Initiates Given Taste of "Paradise"

"When trusted fidsal candidates reached Alamut they were drugged and carried unconscious into the garden. Awakening, they found themselves surrounded for a few hours by all the beauty and joys imaginable; a paradise indeed. But once again they were drugged by stealth and carried out.

"When a fidsal recovered his senses he found himself in the chamber of the Grand Master. 'It is true,' the Master told the candidate, 'you have been in paradise. Go slay this prince and when you return my angels will bear you again into paradise.'"

"With the bright memory of paradise filling his mind every fidsal welcomed danger and courted the death that would usher him into paradise forever.

"The drug that the Grand Master used on his fidsals was Indian hemp, (cannabis indica), also known as hashish, and from the latter term has come the name which Europe fastened on the Ismailis, 'Assassins.'"

"Conrad of Montferat, crusader, fell with an Assassin's dagger in his heart immediately after he was recognized King of Jerusalem; so did Raymond, Count of Tripoli, fall. Prince Edward, later Edward I of England, was stabbed, but recovered. Caliphs and sultans were found murdered. Sultan Sanjar organized an army to wipe out Alamut. One morning when his army was half-way to the fortress he awoke to find a dagger pinning a message to the sand beside his head. Go no farther, it warned. Sultan Sanjar turned around and went home.

"But not even the Assassins could withstand Genghis Khan's westward drive. His Mongol legions captured Alamut in 1256, burned Hasan Sabbah's library and destroyed his garden. The Ismailis dispersed to Africa, India, Syria, and elsewhere. Each had a staff or dala, or initiate, who won converts that entered the order as 'adherents.' A chosen few became fidsals, or devotees, a desperate set of adventurers and racketeers. The fidsals were a sort of foreign legion drawn from many nations and peoples, selected for endurance, for daring, and fanatical exaltation.

Marco Polo learned the astonishing secret of the Old Man of the Aga Khan, did some service for the English among the wild mountaineers and, upon reaching Bombay, was rewarded. He was recognized as leader of the Indian Ismailis, given the title, His Highness, and granted a pension.

"Gradually His Highness the Aga Khan of Aza Hall, Bombay, became the recognized spiritual leader of the Ismailis tribes scattered throughout the Moslem world.

"News stories from Paris bring the strange story of the Assassins down to date, for Aga Khan who recently married Andree Carron, the French dressmaker and daughter of a hotel keeper, is none other than His Highness the Aga Khan III, Knight Grand Commander of the Indian Empire; Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India; Doctor of Laws, Cambridge; Brilliant Star of Zanzibar, 1st Class; nominee for the Noble Peace Prize; racing stable owner, extraordinary, and hereditary leader of the Ismailis.

"The Aga Khan, descendant of the Assassins, numbers his subjects at more than a million, yet he has no territory. His residence is Bombay, but his home is Paris. When he paid $85,000 for the racing colt 'Hurrie On' to add to his stables some of that money came, perhaps from the dusty little towns of Quadmis and Masjad in the mountains near Homs, Syria. Of their own free will the surviving Ismailis of Syria send annually one-fifth of their revenue to the Aga Khan, one of the richest men of Europe.

"Regularly the Aga Khan visits his people and his journeys take him to Morocco, to Syria, to Zanzibar and East Africa, to Persia and the Punjab, to Sind and Bombay. The Ismailis of India are known as Khojas, a class of Mohammedans which by their devotion to trade, have been distributed far and wide.

"Ismailis throughout the world pay tribute to their spiritual and hereditary leader. It is said, by the purchase of small phials of water which are shipped from Paris, or now, perhaps from the chateau near Chambrey in Savoy that the Aga Khan gave to his bride. The water is the Aga Khan's bath water considered sacred by his people and capable of working cures."

"COSMIC FOG" IS SUN'S CORONA, OHIOAN BELIEVES

DELAWARE, Ohio, June 21—(AP)—"Cosmic fog," huge, irregular masses believed to be gas, is believed by Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, director of Perkins observatory here, to be the foundation of the sun's corona.

Dr. Stetson is endeavoring to determine how close the "fog" approaches the earth.

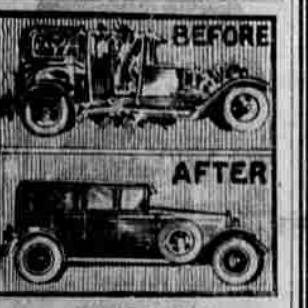

The sun's corona, he thinks, is the light reflected from a cloud of the "fog" much as light is reflected by dust particles which then become visible.

Before and After

In the face of the unseemly haste early manifest in advancing the claims of at least one candidate for the republican nomination for governor, the attitude taken by the Deschutes county central committee is pleasing indeed. The committee apparently feels that there is a time for all things, and that a period of mourning should properly intervene before expressions may be given as to any probable action bearing on the question of replacing the nominee whom death had removed. Such feeling is indicative of entire good taste.

As has been mentioned, this was not apparent in all quarters. In fact, its lack was evidenced almost coincidentally with announcement of George W. Joseph's passing. Friends of Albin W. Norblad immediately urged that he, as runner-up in the republican primaries, should be designated by the state central committee as the party nominee. Thus he was placed for the second time in but a few months, in an extremely embarrassing position. The first, it will be recalled, was on the occasion of the death of Governor Patterson.

In the very newspaper editions chronicling Oregon's loss, the successor announced himself as a candidate for nomination. Now, it will be observed, the well-intentioned but ill-advised offices of his supporters again create the picture of one vaulting over an open casket as a short cut to a coveted prize.

It is not the purpose of The Bulletin to discuss the situation which has arisen in the republican party except insofar as the claims of Norblad backers have made it necessary that it be discussed. The situation would be more pleasing if the necessity had not been created.

A better time for all this would be when the state central committee is organized and faces the task of selecting a representative candidate.

Even now it may be recognized that this task will not be an easy one. The committee, in making its choice, must not only name a man with the peculiar abilities required of a chief executive, but in that same man must be embodied qualities which will indicate that there is a reasonable possibility that he can be elected.

Aside from the premature announcement of the Norblad candidacy, which would undoubtedly lessen the chances for election, there is another angle which his supporters have failed to take into consideration. They have seen only the fact that his vote was second high in the primaries; they have failed to see, either inadvertently, or wilfully, that, since the primaries, the relative popularity which he then enjoyed has greatly diminished. It is extremely doubtful if he could command the party solidarity which would be necessary for a successful campaign.

And that is a requirement which must be present. To ignore its absence would be to perform service for which the democratic nominee should be sincerely thankful. (Grand Bulletin.)
