

BOSTON ROOKS SHOW RED FANS EXCITING PLAY

Wally Berger and Buster Chatham Show Talent in National League — Ex-Beaver Hits .367.

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer. Cincinnati's fans are getting a chance to appraise the work of a few of the year's most promising newcomers to National league circles.

While the Boston Braves are playing at Cincinnati, there is a chance to compare the play of Wally Berger and Buster Chatham with that of "Jersey Joe" Stripp of Cincinnati.

The Boston youngsters are coming at a great rate. Berger, tying back Wilson for the league's home run leadership, while Stripp is one of Cincinnati's most effective batsmen.

And yesterday the Red fans had a thrilling game tossed in for good measure with Cincinnati winning, 7 to 6, in the ninth inning.

Chatham, formerly of Portland, Ore., brought his average for the 23 games he has participated in up to .367. Berger and Stripp each made two hits in four times, tallying current averages of .326 and .306 respectively.

The Indians came to life yesterday after losing five straight, and pounded George Pliginsk from the mound and won 11 to 7.

Babe Ruth's 27th home-run of the year overshadowed the rest of the Yankee hitting.

The Senators moved a game away by beating Detroit, 6 to 4, in a duel between Al Crowder and Charley Sullivan.

The Philadelphia Athletics spent the afternoon deciding a double-header with the St. Louis Browns, losing away the first game, 8 to 2, and winning the second, 8 to 3.

Brooklyn's lead in the National league was cut from two games to one by the Cubs, who won the second contest of their "first place" series, 7 to 7, in 10 innings.

Pittsburgh defeated the Phillies for the third time, 6 to 4.

St. Louis Cardinals lost their second straight to the New York Giants, 9 to 4.

Seattle's Slamming Swede

Charles Hansen

The wrestling evangelist, Charles Hansen of Seattle, is not only expected to give Bob Kruse, Portland, one of the toughest matches of the season here Monday night, but also to display some of the best wrestling ever seen in Medford. Hansen is well known for his ability in the ring and is dreaded for the reverse body slam with which he has won most of his matches.

The reverse slam comes with such suddenness that the victim invariably loses the fall.

Kruse is adept with the wrist-lock and is able to withstand grueling punishment. He wins matches when apparent defeat is staring him in the face.

Kruse has not been in Medford since he wrestled Ed (Strangler) Lewis here a few weeks ago. The Portland man gave that famous heavyweight plenty of work for 35 minutes, until Kruse fell victim to a vicious punch that practically laid him out.

Practically all of Medford will perform in the special event of four rounds with Walter Logan. The main event is scheduled for eight 15-minute rounds. Harry Elliott, Eugene, will referee.

Composite Picture of Tribune's Fish Writers Excites Comment

In response to the many requests from readers concerning the sporting design appearing at the head of the Mail Tribune's wild life column, which Dick Green and Ernest Rostel are the conductors, or chauffeurs, and which those readers say is somewhat confusing, explanation is herewith made.

It is not simply a design of a sportsman and a big fish side by side, as seems at first glance, but is a composite picture of Erney, Dick and the fish all beside themselves, eager to impart rod and gun news to the public.

The body of the cylindrical appearing object is that of the fish, but the look of intelligence on its countenance is that of Erney. The expression on the face of the human figure is that of Dick and the figure's left arm, which hangs so attentively over the mouth of the fish is also Dick's, and so far as that is concerned, and so on.

The long vertical object held by the right hand is not a buggy whip, or a starved gun barrel. It is supposed to be a fishing pole.

The sweater and golf pants of the figure, which give so much class to the outfit, although on Dick's frame in the picture, are Herb Grey's.

Erney's body, except the facial expression, is basking inside of the big fish, whose tail is its own. The rope so gaily clustered about the fish pole is thought to be a replica of a fishing line.

Herb Grey is the author of the design, and he obtained his ideas of it from memory of his visit last year to the Ugg-Ugg island of the Bewildered group of isles in the South Seas.

When the cut wears out it will be presented to the historical museum at Jacksonville for the edification and amusement of tourists.

In the mean time, this wild life column is one of the most popular features ever introduced in the Mail Tribune, especially with the men folks, and even children cry for it, or meebly at the design.

ANGELS DRIVE SOLONS FROM LEAGUE LEAD

Fourth Straight Defeat By Stars Puts Sacs in Second Place in Coast Flag Race.

(By the Associated Press.)

Los Angeles moved into first place in the Pacific Coast league yesterday, ending Sacramento's long residence there, by again downing Seattle, 8 to 7, while Hollywood was giving the Senators their fourth straight trouncing, 8 to 2.

The Angels got three runs in the opening of the tenth of the game at Seattle, only to have the Indians score three and tie it up in the latter half. Dittmar's single brought in the winning tally in the eleventh.

The second pair of first division clubs, San Francisco and Oakland, tied for several days, both lost to stay deadlocked in standings. Turpin, third Sack pitcher to take part, walked Robertson with the bases loaded in the tenth, forcing in the run that gave Portland a 10 to 9 victory. Walters threw the last inning for the Ducks, got a sacrifice, and won the game.

The Missions made it three out of four from Oakland, winning, 11 to 3, as Pete Daglia, Acorn hurling ace, was driven from the box and Pearson failed to hold the Reds thereafter. Merton Nelson was well out of trouble on the mound for the Missions until a futile rally in the eighth.

"Fred, I was out in the Dead Indian country rounding up several stray grizzlies," said Griffin—"It was when we were mere boys. As usual, we had a 'greenhorn' along with us.

The prospect of hunting bear, cougar and deer in the tall timber nearly overcame him. As we lay around the camp the first night he asked questions galore. Some of the questions were good, one in particular. I have long remembered it.

"Fred," he asked, "suppose I see a bear; where shall I aim at him and what shall I do if he charges me?"

"Fred, record-holder as a slayer of more than 100 bears that year, in his slow way, answered: 'The place to hit a bear is any place you can. He'll be leavin' Dead Indian, when you see him, goin' to Klamath, an there won't be much time to pick out fatal spots. Hit him an' slow him down. Then do the rest as you please.'

"As for a bear charging you in these woods, yuh needn't worry none, boy. I reckon I've killed a few bear, an' only two of 'em ever charged me. Sometimes a feller will cripple a bear on a mountain side an' the darn thing will come rollin' down the slope. But he ain't charpin' none. Keep away from a shot bear an' yuh'll never be harmed."

"Now the greenhorn had the right idea. There are certain spots on game animals well worth knowing when one lines up one's sights. I question whether one hunter in 20 knows where these places are, and whether he will remember to hold on these spots when he does get a shot."

"The next day the greenhorn shot his rifle dry and swore the buck he was shooting at had horns all over him. The 'buck' in question was really nothing other than a calf which had strayed away from its mother.

"Under conditions as they prevailed in the Dead Indian region, Fred's hunting theory was correct. When we got a shot at brain there, he was in full retreat. Few hunters can place a fatal shot in a retreating bear. Neck shots are good at close range. Don't shoot at a bear's head. His skull is hard, slopes back and his brain is small. Head shots call for great skill to place the bullet in the brain."

EDDY ACT HELD AS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The opinion holds unconstitutional the Eddy act of the 1929 legislature, providing that a person who votes on measures requiring bond issues or special tax levies must be a taxpayer.

With Rod and Gun In Rogue Valley

One of Oregon's pioneer hunters returned to his native hearth the other day when John B. Griffin, second white boy born in the mining town of Jacksonville, Ore., in 1852, revisited the Rogue river valley. Griffin lives in Trinidad, Cal., now, but he gets back to his former stamping ground at intervals. He never tires of telling stories and anecdotes of the days when settlers had to hunt game in order to keep the family larder going.

One of Griffin's hunting comrades in their youth was Fred Barneberg of Jacksonville.

"Fred and I were out in the Dead Indian country rounding up several stray grizzlies," said Griffin—"It was when we were mere boys. As usual, we had a 'greenhorn' along with us.
