

A NICE GIRL COMES TO TOWN

By Myrtle Greig

SYNOPSIS: A visit to London puts a new twist into the life of Mary Lou. Her romance with Brynner Whittemore is broken up when he falls in love with Gladys Day, who dances at the Emerald Dragon, a night club. Brynner thought Mary Lou was his wife. With Tony Titherington, however, Mary Lou has a better time than she ever had before. Tony is an aviator with ambitions to fly around the world. His wealthy aunt won't finance the project unless Tony goes with some girl of whom she approves. Tony decides to take Mary Lou for his companion. Meanwhile Brynner becomes engaged to Gladys. There is a robbery at the Emerald Dragon, and police suspect "Gentleman Freddy." Gladys has a cousin named Freddy Mason, whom Brynner dislikes, and he thinks Mason may have been responsible. Gladys, however, assures him that Mason was in Paris at the time.

Chapter 13 AUNT ETHELBERTA

MARY LOU awoke with a start at seven o'clock on Sunday morning. She was thankful the sun was shining, for a change, but she shuddered at the thought of what might happen that day.

Tony, however, didn't wake up until three hours later.

"What the devil are you doing getting in all that damned sunlight?" he exploded as Wallis, his man, pulled up the blind.

Wallis, however, was firm.

"May I remind you, sir, that you asked to be called? I believe you are motoring down to lunch with your aunt today."

"Jumping Jehosophat!" Tony exclaimed. "I'd forgotten completely. And it's important, too. I'm playing my last card to get Aunt Ethelberta to back my flight."

"Your last card, sir?" Wallis inquired, as he gathered up the clothes Tony had left strewn all over the floor.

"Tony grinned.

"And she's a mighty pretty card, too."

Wallis retrieved Tony's trousers from the chandelier.

"If I may say so, sir, all the cards in your pack are good-looking."

"True," Tony admitted, "but this one's the goods."

Meanwhile, in the Jerome's bedroom, Mary Lou was curled up on one end of the bed, sipping tea between bites of toast. Jay was doing likewise.

"This is your big day, isn't it, Mary Lou?" Jay asked. "The day when Miss Titherington sticks a little tick on you—will do, or won't do?"

"Pray for the former," Mary Lou sighed. "Tony seems to set great store by my meeting his aunt."

"Why should he worry about what his aunt thinks?" Jerry interposed.

"Auntie is his bank account," Jay explained. "And from all I hear she's mighty particular."

"It was this fellow Tony I'd see her in—"

"Hush, darling, you don't know a thing about it," Jay retorted. Then, to Mary Lou: "Grey is the right color to wear today, I think. Blonds always look so demure in grey, with just a touch of blue. That should appeal to this persnickety aunt."

"But I haven't anything grey," Mary Lou objected.

"No matter, you can wear that suit of mine. It should alter her here and there."

Tony, as usual, was half an hour late. He made up for it, however, by his enthusiasm over Mary Lou's appearance.

"Jove, Mary Lou, but you look stunning today!" With a wink, he added "—but not so stunning that you'll knock Aunt Ethelberta in the eye as Gladys did."

Mary Lou and Jay exchanged meaningful glances.

Tony's long blue racing car ate up the miles as they drove toward Surrey.

"Why so quiet, Mary Lou?" Tony asked.

"I—I'm just a bit afraid of meeting your aunt."

"That's absurd. Her ways are a trifle eccentric, but she's a dear at heart. I know you'll hit it off with her."

Yet Mary Lou was awed at the thought of meeting one of the wealthiest women in England. She imagined Miss Titherington's home as an immense establishment, with numerous grounds and an army of servants.

"Here we are," cried Tony as he turned down a lane off the main road.

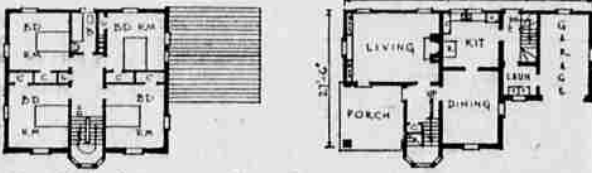

"Where?"

They were approaching a secluded, unpretentious structure that appeared to be a gardener's cottage.

"What did you expect—a Buckingham palace?"

He drew the car to a standstill and opened the door for Mary Lou. No stretch of the imagination could describe the home as more than a cottage. Its thatched roof curled round the sides of two tiny gabled

Square Plan House Still Picturesque

One of the features of this unusual design is that it is picturesque even though built on a square plan.

It is English in character and treatment of the half timber material, but the square plan is retained. The half timber, brick whitewashed for the first story, stucco on metal lath, and wood or slate shingles would go far toward accomplishing the desired effects with materials.

Among the features is a bay window on the stairs giving a central motive to the front elevation, which should be to the east.

No space is wasted on the upper floor, where there is a bedroom on each corner. In fact, still

PROSCRIBE METHODIST AS HEALER

Rev. Schaffer of Nehalem Must Choose Between Practice of 'Art' and Ministry — Kimball College Salvage Plan Talked.

ASTORIA, June 28.—(AP)—The Rev. John R. Schaffer, Nehalem, charged by Bishop H. Lester Smith and his cabinet for practicing and accepting pay in one of the lesser branches of healing arts, today continued his relationship with the Oregon annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, but upon contingent conditions.

By a vote of the cabinet, the Rev. Mr. Schaffer remained in the conference, but it was required that at the end of the year he was to choose between the art of healing and the ministry.

The Rev. I. R. Aldrich, LaGrande, who has been on the superannuation list, was recommended effective for appointment.

Ernest W. Peterson, Portland, was re-elected president of the Oregon Conference Laymen's association. Other officers were: John L. Gray, West Linn, secretary; Ralph Speelman, Portland; Roy Lockenour, Salem, and Dr. W. H. Pollard, Springfield, vice-presidents; O. C. Bortzmeyer, Portland, was re-elected trustee of the conference endowment funds.

Efforts to salvage Kimball Theological seminary at Salem, closed for one year, will be made by referring to the board of education a proposition that a commission from the Oregon conference negotiate the matter with similar commissions from the Pacific Northwest, Idaho and two California conferences instead of carrying the burden on the Oregon conference alone.

A copy of the letter written by Martin Luther, for which J. Pierpont Morgan paid the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, will be read at the morning service of the English Lutheran church, Sunday at 11 o'clock. Dr. Funk will speak on "Letters of Recommendation" at the morning hour of worship. The public will be interested in the special series of summer services beginning June 29th. You are cordially invited to attend.

DR. McFADDEN OF TALENT PASSES SUDDENLY TODAY

Dr. Charles W. McFadden passed away at his home near Talent at 5:30 a. m. today as the result of cerebral hemorrhage of but a few hours duration. Dr. McFadden was born at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, Feb. 21, 1862, aged 68 years. Four months, seven days.

In his early life he took up the profession of dentistry and practiced in Duluth, Minnesota for 30 years. Twenty years ago he became interested in Rogue River fruit and purchased interests in the Zenith orchards near Talent where he resided at the time of his death. After his investment here, he continued to practice until ten years ago when he moved to Talent.

Besides his wife Clara McFadden, he leaves three children, Dr. C. A. McFadden of Santa Monica, Calif.; Mrs. C. E. Borg of Medford and Lieutenant A. G. W. McFadden of the U. S. navy now located in China. The remains are at the Conger Funeral Parlor and arrangements will be announced in due time.
