COPCO TELLS THE WORLD OF OUT-DOOR PARADISE

Community advertising carried on by the California Oregon Power company in the interests of the communities served continues to bear fruit in the shape of attracting favorable attention from tourists and potential settlers. One of the latest examples of this effective advertising appeared in last month's issue of the California Journal of Development.

Mr. Harley was an active factor in the life of this valley through the various phases of its development, and he was blessed with a helpmeet worthy of him in every way. Both of them had an ideal of beauty in home and its surroundings, and when "Jim" as we affectionately knew him, was busy, night and day in his rounds with his threshing machine, his wife was equally busy in caring for the little orchard and vineyard and her family cares.

A treasure which each of them valued was the gold medal won at the World's Fair at Portland. It was extremely difficult that year to arouse the interest of our growers to the importance of getting the gold medals for Jackson county products. Finally the order came from the county court, through Judge Dunn to "Buy, beg or steal—but get the goods." Men were riding daily gathering the exhibits, and the late George Jackson was assembling in the district where the Hurleys lived. Mr. Harley was on the road, day and night, with his threshing outfit, and "nobody home" was the daily report. It was imperative that we secure some bunches of the famed Tokay grapes and Mr. Jackson was too conscientious to purloin them, until assured that it would be all right. Some fine clusters were finally brought in and forwarded with the next daily shipment of exhibits. Daily placarded and credited to the grower. When unpacked at the exhibit booth a lady bystander was rather critical, asserting that she had better grapes growing in her own vineyard, but when the bottom of the crate was reached and showed the placards, the lady proved to be Mrs. Hurley herself and she spent several days enlightening the observers as to the culture and care of such fruit and when she returned home sent forward clusters far better and which won the gold medal. This was a source of satisfaction to both as long as they lived.

Would that this generation could duplicate citizens of such high character!

A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO THE LATE JIM HURLEY

(Contributed)

When the last of the old time residents of the Rogue River valley finishes his course on earth, none can "fold the drapery of his couch about him" and lie down to pleasant "dreams" with a better claim to a work well done than James M. Hurley, whose remains were given back to Mother Earth Friday afternoon.
