

REUNION OF BLUE-GREY ENVISIONED

Head of Oregon G. A. R. Will Work For 1931 Joint Encampment of Union And Confederate Veterans in Washington, D. C.

"I would like to bring the old combatants together, to shake hands over the bloody chasm, to forget the past"—Wm. M. Colvig, '85 state commander of the Oregon G. A. R., leaned back in his chair yesterday afternoon, gazed across the long expanse of lawn at the Warner home on South State, where giant oak trees cast shadows across the green to add to the cool peacefulness of the place, then explained the resolution he contemplates introducing at the national encampment of Grand Army men in Cincinnati, Ohio, in August, to promote a greater peace and friendliness between the men who fought for their country in the years of '61 to '65—men who wore blue and men who wore gray.

The resolution is to fix the city of Washington, D. C., as the meeting place of the 1931 encampment and will ask that all veterans of the Civil war, both Union and Confederate, be invited to attend and join in the same celebration.

Units Sections "Such an encampment would serve a useful purpose," Commander Colvig added, "in removing the last traces of hatred or ill feeling which may exist between the two sections of country."

He believes that congress would readily appropriate a sufficient sum of money to pay the transportation of every veteran, who is able to attend. There are at this time less than 50,000 Union veterans. In 1931 it is estimated there will be less than 25,000 Grand Army men in the United States and of this 25,000, Commander Colvig pointed out, not more than 5000 will be physically able to attend such a reunion. There would be less than 2000 confederates able to attend and an appropriation of $300,000 would cover the expenses.

Respects Opinions A respect for every man, who has fought for what he considered right, was expressed yesterday afternoon by Commander Colvig as he considered soldiers of the past and present, dating back to the two survivors of the Revolutionary war with whom he shook hands at a Fourth of July celebration at Zanesville, Ohio, in 1866. Grey and Noble were their names and their ages 105 and 104 years.

"I once addressed a reunion of Confederate soldiers on Lookout mountain. It was the year of the St. Louis world fair," Commander Colvig continued, reminiscences developing in affluent stream of conversation, characteristic of his story telling hours, "I was never treated better in my life. We've forgotten all about our troubles," the southern soldier said, who invited me to make a speech before the reunion campfire. The women, however, showed as I talked, that they still felt Sherman's army desolated the country a little too much."

Cemetery Described Speaking of the old battle-grounds, Commander Colvig turned to a description of the Federal cemetery at Orchard Knob near Mission Ridge, where graves of Union men and those who fought for the old south are divided only by a roadway. On the tomb of a confederate the flag of the old confederacy is carved into the marble above the motto, "He died for his country." Across the roadway his son, who in later years served under Joe Wheeler and met death in the Philippines, rests under a tomb carrying the same motto, beneath a carved likeness of the United States flag. An arch of marble has been built across the roadway, joining the two tombs by clasped hands. The arch also carried a motto. It reads, "They died for their country."

"When I stood and saw that arch," Commander Colvig paused in his speech, "I saw that it was the foundation for a mighty pretty story." A reunion of Confederate and Union boys, he believes would be an expression of the beautiful thought portrayed in the archway. Enlisted in 1863 Commander Colvig enlisted in the Oregon cavalry on April 5th, 1863. He was discharged exactly three years later. He completed his service west of the Rockies mountains although he enlisted in hope of going back to the scene of fighting. The two regiments formed in Oregon, infantry and cavalry, were stationed at the posts vacated by the regular troops called east from the western outposts and had Indians rather than Confederates to combat. "We were distributed throughout the country at all western posts. We located and built Fort Klamath during the summer and fall of '63. The next spring I went to Fort Boise. I was young then," Commander Colvig concluded. "Eighty-seven per cent of the soldiers were under 22 years of age." He drew a list of statistics from his pocket to prove the ages of the boys who will meet in Cincinnati and perhaps Washington, D. C., and a story of the bloody battles in which officers fell along with privates.

OREGON STATE CHIROPRACTIC MEETING ENDS IN POLE MOVE

The state chiropractic convention in this city held a busy final session Thursday. At the morning session, "Gynecology" was ably discussed by Dr. Carnaga of Albany, showing progress being made in this field of chiropractic research is proving very satisfactory. Dr. Hagen of Eugene demonstrated for the convention recent developments in "pelvic adjustment."

Much time was devoted in the afternoon to "obstetrics" by Dr. Elliot of Portland, who has had much experience in this special field. According to his report, success of the chiropractor in these cases is highly encouraging. He stressed the great importance of having the patient under observation for several months previous to confinement. Dr. Carnaga also stressed this point in discussing the subject and said that of all his cases it had never been necessary for him to resort to the use of instruments.

The state industrial accident commission, discussed under the leadership of Dr. A. Budden of Portland, held an important position on the program, vital in interest to every employer and employee within the state, who is working under its provisions. It was brought out upon the floor of the convention that the employees are much dissatisfied with the present ruling of the commission. They feel that they who pay their money into the state for protection should have the right to select the physician of their choice in case of injury. It is claimed.

Dr. C. P. Foster of Portland was re-elected president of the state association for the coming year and Dr. C. W. Hinkley, because of his efficient service, was re-elected to the position of secretary-treasurer.

The selection of a place for the next convention was left in the hands of the executive board. Upon adjournment all expressed themselves as highly pleased with the results of the convention and the splendid entertainment.

The convention as well as the trip to Crater Lake yesterday by members of the convention was a real success for Medford and southern Oregon.

The trophy for the Oregon Chiropractic Gold champion was won by Dr. Miles Warren of Portland, secretary-treasurer of the state chiropractic board of examiners. The winning of this championship entitles Dr. Warren to enter the national chiropractic golf tournament of the American Chiropractic Association convention to be held at Cincinnati, Ohio, in August.

MEDFORD 'LEGGERS' 744 STUDENTS ON DOTTED LINE FOR OPENING HI TERM

Taking in a little more territory than most bootleggers do, Victor Wood, Medford, was arrested at Ashland Friday evening for selling moonshine to the thirsty in the crowd watching the fireworks display, the closing feature of the Ashland Fourth of July celebration. Yesterday afternoon, Wood was sentenced to 15 days in the county jail and fined $100 in the Gold Hill justice court.

The arrest was made by Officers Herb Moore and C. P. Talent who were summoned on the complaint of a spectator that a man was peddling moonshine in the crowd. He carried several bottles in his shirt and approached, like an appealing prospect with a sales talk. He had made several sales before he was apprehended.

Twelve pints of moonshine were found in his roadster, which may be confiscated.

A stalk of rhubarb 18 inches long and six inches in circumference was grown by A. H. Walker of Pittsburg, Kas.

TOURISTS FIND OUR WATER IS BEST ON TRIP

Praise of Visitors Reaffirms Medford Good Judgment In Obtaining Fine Supply of Aqua.

With the arrival of tourists and other vacationists from all parts of the nation by auto and train in fast increasing number, especially those from foreign lands, the sight of foreign license plates in Medford a very familiar one, comes the old familiar compliments overheard from the many visitors about Medford's cold, clear mountain water. It's sweet taste to the ears of the local populace who, also used to the water from daily use of several years, cannot get over their appreciation for the water, especially when the weather gets quite warm, and find themselves uttering the same complimentary terms as the visitors.

"Didn't I tell you folks—that when we got to Medford you would get the finest drink of water you ever had?" shouted from the drivers' seat of a fine large California car an elderly man yesterday noon as several women who were taking turns getting their fill of water at the fountain beside the chamber of commerce building.

"You didn't tell the half of it," shouted back one drinker on straightening up, the other two women vigorously nodding assent, while a chorus of "hetcha's" came from the occupants of an Iowa car behind, who were evidently traveling with the party in the first car.

Medford people are all the more appreciative of their bountiful supply of pure mountain water when they think of the fact that no matter how hot the weather they have an abundance of the fluid for irrigation of their lawns and gardens, especially when they read of other cities and towns having to inaugurate restrictions on the use of water to conserve their supply.

For instance, the Bend fire department last week issued an order that all sprinkling and other lawn irrigation work must be suspended for one hour after a fire alarm has been sounded, to secure adequate pressure.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS TO BE WASHED OFTEN

Medford's dozen or so street drinking fountains must be kept clean, Mayor A. W. Pipes announced yesterday and he is having arrangements made whereby men in the city employ will wash them thoroughly every other day. There has been considerable complaint that the fountains appear habitually dirty and are not conducive to the greatest joy in drinking water from Medford's million dollar system.
