FAITH GETS A SHAKING (From a Letter) Dear Sir: This jig's up. I can't off between you and the collection agency any longer...

I still believe in you, if you would only write me, and tell me what is the matter, it might do some good but it seems you have turned me down cold... All I can do is to send you this letter by registered mail...

As I said—the jig is up. Your account goes to the collection agency the first of the month and I can't stop it no matter how hard I try... Mr. G.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

SIR Arthur Conan Doyle, who died today, was the exception that proves the rule. We all know "a cobbler should stick to his last," but Sir Arthur was a successful family physician...

Men of science are seldom mystics. Sir Arthur was both. The typical family physician scoffs at crystal gazers. Sir Arthur attended the bodily ills of his neighbors for a generation by day; and at night delved into the occult...

A VERY remarkable man was Sir Arthur, and an exceptionally versatile one. In this versatility, in his excellence in sports (Sir Arthur was a crack golfer and the best amateur billiard player in the United Kingdom)...

SIR Arthur took spiritualism seriously. Lord Balfour regarded it as a "joke." The interesting thing about Sir Arthur's spiritualism, was that it was the faith of a trained scientific man...

"A delusion produced by extreme desire and emotional strain," was the comment of Lord Balfour. Sir Arthur's answer, was to produce a spirit photograph, made possible by ectoplasm, which he explained "was the raw material of psychic phenomena."

"A psychograph of my boy" said Conan Doyle simply, and Lord Balfour, always true to his code, said nothing farther. WHICH was right? Had the family doctor, with his simpler nature, and less penetrating mind, discovered a fundamental truth...

Perhaps, at any rate, it is fair to assume both these distinguished gentlemen know the answer now. But we fear it is something the living world can never know.

TELL THE WORLD ABOUT OUR WATER

EVERY tourist who stops in Medford joins in praise of our marvelous drinking water. No city water on the entire coast can compare with it. And as the season warms up, this appreciation will grow.

At the risk of being classed as a crank on the subject, for we have stressed this point ever since the new water system was established, we again maintain, that in refusing to capitalize this unique asset, Medford is losing one of the best publicity bets she has.

At comparatively small expense, ornamental drinking fountains and rest rooms could be established at the north and south entrances to the city. That such stations would be appreciated and extensively used by the tourists is certain.

But more important, under such circumstances, the world would know of Medford's water, whereas now, only those know who happen to make this city a stopping point.

Such stations would benefit every resident of Medford, and every business. As no public benefactor has appeared to erect them as a "monument," we believe the expense of erecting them, could with perfect propriety be distributed on the tax roll.

The farmer now has sprays to discourage all pests that prey on vegetables. The one for tourists however is still composed of bird shot.

Einstein thinks space is just matter in another form. This is the most charitable explanation of the human head yet suggested.

They told us business would "open up" in early summer, and that really is one way to describe a yawn.

Government could give a lot of bidders the work they deserve. There are plenty of big rocks to make into little ones.

History doesn't exactly repeat itself. The Colonials were taxed by an alien racketeer, but he was a German—not a Dago.

That king in Bible times who was considered crazy because he ate grass may have been the first spinach addict.

Morrow's idea is to leave the wet-or-dry question to the state instead of the individual.

Smut is injuring the grain crop again; in some instances adding a little rot to the wild oats, also.

Americanism: Feeling rich, though broke, when the headlines shout prosperity; feeling destitute, despite full pockets, when everybody talks hard times.

Anyway, America has a lot of big men who know just how to run the country, and there's nothing to do but add up the profits.

Freedom from gangs is much like other freedom. It is reserved for those who have backbone enough to win it.

The trend of population may be cityward, but it's hard to find a middle-aged man who doesn't know what a "ringer" is.

Nature tried to discourage the bore. Suppose she had given him one ear and two mouths!

The land can't produce good heavyweights when every tough looper is needed as a bad guy at Hollywood.

One reason why prohibition is a political issue is because a candidate doesn't need a whole lot of brains to discuss it.

DETROIT, July 7.—(AP)—Dr. Robert Hart, chief of the United States public health service in the Philippines, disclosed today there had since the disease appeared in the islands two months ago.

Dr. Hart did not believe there would be an epidemic. He said the disease would have claimed 10,000 lives had it reached the epidemic stage. He estimated two per cent of the population were cholera carriers and warned that "cholera will continue in the Philippines as long as the people do not change their unsanitary sewage systems."

SALEM, Ore., July 7.—(AP)—Eva Louise Beckley, 17-year old high school girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Beckley of route 4, of Salem, was killed almost instantly Sunday night when the machine in which she was riding was struck by an automobile driven by Frank Kaylor of Salem, south of here on the Pacific highway.

Three other daughters and his wife escaped uninjured, as did Kaylor.

SUNDOWN STORIES

WEATHER FOLLY. By Mary Graham Bonner. The Little Black Clock not only had magic enough to turn the time backward or forward but he could have the children meet such strange and interesting friends.

Now they had met O'ld Man Weather, and he was talking now about his family. "Some of them," he said, "like to live in different levels of air; for you know I have some lovely cloud children. When several of my children are alike in their ways I give them all the same name."

"For instance, there are my Nimbus cloud children. They love the rain. They like to dress in thick, dark, shapely clothes, and they don't mind how ragged they look about the edges."

"Just like people who wear old clothes on rainy days," Peggy said, and the Little Black Clock laughed.

"Yes, and they take after me in a way, too. I don't care about having perfectly tailored clothes. (The children thought to themselves that this was certainly true.) I like to leave my cuffs and the ends of my trousers unfinished. I don't want to look too perfectly and too stiffly dressed. Then there are my Cirrus cloud children."

"I gave them their name years and years ago. They are called 'mares' tails, too, because they wear such long, thin, wavy costumes, decorated with icy crystals."

"He went on talking delightedly about his children. John and Peggy could understand that he would always have a good deal to say for himself. People spent so much time talking about the weather that he naturally would have a feeling of importance."

"Couldn't I tell your friends some more about my family?" he asked the Little Black Clock.

"Yes," the Little Black Clock agreed, "but not so very much more as I'm planning a long trip soon."
